Powers Postpone Arms Conference for Week; Reich Supports Hitler

U. S. Envoy Davis Beats Effort to Adjourn Indefinitely.

Mapping Reply to Nazis, Statesmen Are Against Hint of Begging.

Geneva, Oct. 15 (AP).—Statesmen of the four big powers decided today that the disarmament conference should adjourn approximately a week, but there were assurances that if the conference dies, at least it will die slowly.

After a day-long discussion of the gravity of Germany's withdrawal from the disarmament conference and the League of Nations, representatives of England, France, Italy and the United States refused to admit disarmament is a dead cause.

The adjournment was considered necessary for a world-wide inventory of the international situation.

Wish to Consult Cabinets.

So serious, indeed, was Germany's bolt from the machinery of international life that governments will want to consult with one another after cabinet meetings. Without German participation, statesmen seemed to realize it will scarcely be practical to make a convention. So, eventually, the disarmament conference may have to decide on a long adjournment.

Nevertheless, various governments will be asked to give their opinion whether it is feasible to conclude a treaty and sign it, but make everything conditional on Germany's adherence.

France, particularly, regards Germany's withdrawal from the international mechanism of peace a most serious matter. Foreign Minister Joseph Paul-Boncour firmly and energetically made this clear to his colleagues today.

Boncour fought tenaciously and won his contention the conference should make a clear-cut and vigorous reply to the telegram of Baron Von Neurath, Germany's foreign minister, announcing the Reich had retired from the conference.

Germany will be told in brief phrases her accusations that the other great powers are insincere when they say they will disarm, are entirely unfounded and unjust.

Met With Henderson.

The statesmen met at the hotel of Sir Arthur Henderson, president of the conference, and sat from morning until 9 p. m., so engrossing was their discussion—they were not always in accord—Henderson, even forgot the British custom of offering tea.

The consensus of the delegates was that there should be no attempt made to implore Germany to return to the conference.

No suggestion was made that a five-power conference, to include Germany, the United States, France, Italy and Great Britain should be held.

Davis Wins Point.

When the representatives first met, there was a strong sentiment to call disarmament neogtiations off and adjourn the conference sine die. But step by step, Norman H. Davis, the American Ambassador at Large,

Germany Owes League She Quit $450,000 in Dues

Geneva, Oct. 15 (U.P.).—Germany is behind in her dues to the League of Nations. She owes 2,300,000 Swiss francs (about $450,000), it was revealed.

Germany failed to pay her dues in 1932 and 1933. She promised to hold the money in an account earmarked for the league, providing the league spent money in Germany for supplies. It was suggested that the league buy German pencils.

Italy Assumes Mediator Role In League Bolt

Disarmament Conference Postponement Urged in Communique.

Rome, Oct. 15 (U.P.).—The Italian government issued a communique tonight declaring the disarmament conference must be postponed pending more favorable circumstances.

The communique said: "The decision by Germany to withdraw from the arms conference, although unexpected, was received by the greatest calm. None denies that this decision is grave, especially in view of developments, but under the circumstances the situation must be confronted realistically and every possibility of reaching an understanding examined.

Later Parley Suggested.

"The substance and tone of Chancellor Hitler's speech and message to the German people do not close the door to conciliation, reaffirming categorically Germany's desires for collaboration for peace.

"Germany's abandonment of the disarmament conference makes imperative postponement pending more favorable circumstances for the re-examination of the whole problem of armaments."

The communique was regarded as an indication that Premier Benito Mussolini is considering the role of mediator.

This mediation move also was supported by the optimistic tone of the officially inspired press, which stated generally that the roads toward a settlement must not be considered closed irretrievably.

Agreement May Result.

It was stressed that an agreement may result from subsequent consultation among the major powers, as contemplated in the terms of the four-power pact assuring peace in Europe. The pact was described as an efficacious instrument for the restoration of confidence.

The press stated that an armaments solution could be found outside Geneva, which, it was pointed out, does not represent the "last boundary of human possibilities," and generally hinted that Italy stood ready to lead in any cooperation.

Germany and Poland In Accord on Tariffs

Warsaw, Poland, Oct. 15 (AP).—Polish and German economic experts deliberating here have reached a temporary understanding concerning tariff problems, it was learned today.

Germany, it was understood, promised not to issue any special decrees against imports from Poland.

Revolt of Siamese Navy Is Reported

National Arsenal Seized, Declare Passengers.

Penang, Federated Malay States (Monday), Oct. 16 (AP).—Passengers arriving today from Bangkok, Siam, said the Siamese navy had joined rebels in their revolt and seized the national arsenal. They reported also the important station of Petchaburi was captured.

Seizure of the arsenal means that government troops will be unable to replenish ammunition when present stocks are exhausted.

General Strike Urged Moment War Starts

Birmingham, England, Oct. 15 (U.P.).—A general strike to paralyze the nation the moment war is declared was urged tonight by the eminent philosopher, C. E. M. Joad, in an address to the "No More War" Conference. Joad declared this would halt any war before "civilization is destroyed."

"Within 24 hours London could be destroyed," Joad declared. "Such of the inhabitants as survived would be in their last convulsions, vomiting incessantly from mustard-chlorine gas.

British Editor Sees New War

Declares Locarno Pact Places His Nation With France.

London, Oct. 15 (AP).—Lord Beaverbrook, the publisher, pleaded for denunciation of the Locarno peace pact in a speech tonight, declaring France "at this moment" has the right to demand British cooperation in military action against Germany.

"At present," he said, "we must take part if a war breaks out. The government of Great Britain speaking through Mr. Baldwn 10 days ago intimated that the treaty of Locarno is regarded by the ministers as of the same mportance as the treaty guaranteeing the neutrality of Belgium for which we went to war in 1914.

"The treaty of Locarno obliges us, after deliberations of the council of the League of Nations, to assist the French in driving armed Germans from the left bank of the Rhine if fortifications are built or military defensive measures are taken there by the Germans."

Asserting that this was being done by the Germans, Lord Beaverbrook said:

Bolivian President's Son Killed in Combat

La Paz, Bolivia, Oct. 15 (U.P.).—Alberto Salamanca, son of President Daniel Salamanca, was killed in action in the Fort Nanawa sector of the disputed Chaco territory in fighting with Paraguayan forces, according to an official communique from Fort Munoz today.

Nazi Leaders Still Hope Arms Compromise Possible.

Berlin, Oct. 15 (U.P.).—Chancellor Adolf Hitler's withdrawal from the League of Nations met with nation-wide expressions of approval today.

The press unanimously backed the Nazi government's summary action, which set Europe astir with uneasy comment on future effects, not only on the continent, but in the rest of the world.

Here the reaction was that Hitler's bold move has clarified the atmosphere. It was felt the long-drawn-out efforts to reach an arms control, if not actual limitation at present, had gained little, if anything, in the way of practical arms cuts.

Says Fog Dissipated.

The Voelkischer Beobachter said: "The government's decision has at one stroke dissipated the fog with which these astute diplomats have surrounded Germany * * * Perhaps the statesmen recognize now that their own interests demand they no longer treat Germany as a third-rate power."

There was little further comment in official quarters. The government leaders, from Hitler down, evidently felt their action spoke for itself—and there was nothing further to be done.

However, the United Press learned that Nazi officials still were hopeful that Germany's abrupt move would crystallize the arms situation generally, and that the Nazi government was ready to collaborate to the limit of its resources in efforts to preserve peace in Europe, if permitted a role of absolute equality.

Awaiting Geneva Move.

Taking advantage of the complete Sunday lull, members of the government eagerly awaited tomorrow's developments in Geneva, where the preliminary disarmament conference is scheduled to reconvene.

Nazi chieftains openly hoped that the conciliatory tone of Chancellor Hitler's radio broadcast yesterday would react favorably in league quarters, and some arms compromise might yet be reached.

Hitler's speech gave foreigners here the impression that Germany did not intend to burn all her bridges, but hoped, on the contrary, that Italy's suggestion, that arms and peace efforts be removed from Geneva to another location, where Germany might return to the parleys, would be accepted.

The four-power peace pact, signed in Rome recently, for example, might be used as a pretext to bring these chief European powers together—Germany, France, Italy and Great Britain—for a reconsideration of the general armaments problem.

Seen as Only Course.

Most Germans agreed that withdrawal from the league was the only possible means of protecting the nation's honor and prestige. It can scarcely be doubted that the chancellor's radio speech last night convinced the people of the logic and necessity of his move.

Interest also centered here in the forthcoming Reichstag elections called for November 12, following President Paul Von Hindenburg's dissolution of the present Reichstag and his decree calling on the people to voice their opinion of Hitler's firm foreign policy.

Whether the Nazi government intends to proceed with a policy of rearmament in the meantime remained.

The Nation now is faced with three weeks of strife prior to the November Reichstag elections. The ballot will be unique in the history of Republican Germany in that the public can vote only for one party and on one issue.

Must Poll 80 Per Cent.

The chief question is not for whom or what to vote, but whether to vote at all. The Nazis must bring at least 75 to 80 per cent of the voters to the polls in order to vindicate Hitler's repeated claims that that proportion of the nation is solidly behind him.

The Hitlerites, however, are patently confident of their power and are plainly not only willing but anxious to test their nation-wide strength and again prove their argument—invaluable in dealing with the rest of the world—that the Reich has wiped out all internal political and geographical distinctions and become permanently Nazi.

U. S. Envoy Awaits Reply to Protest

Berlin, Oct. 15 (AP).—United States Ambassador William E. Dodd expects to receive tomorrow the promised communication from Foreign Minister von Neurath regarding representations to the foreign office in connection with the maltreatment of American citizens.

The American Embassy was fairly swamped by events attending the rupture at Geneva and the reaction of the foreign press. Von Neurath was in Munich today with Chancellor Hitler.

Woll Assails Federal Rule For Unions

Attacks Gen. Johnson's Strike Stand; Sees Fascism Threat.

A. F. L. Leader Says Strife Is Result of Code Violation.

Criticizing the attitude of Gen. Hugh S. Johnson on the relationship of Government to union labor, Matthew Woll, vice president of the American Federation of Labor, yesterday scored Government "participation and control" of unions.

In a letter to Frank Powers, of Chicago, president of the Commercial Telegraphers Union, Woll objected to remark made by the National Recovery Administrator at the Federation convention.

"The General gave us to understand there must be 'governmental participation and control' in unions and organizations of employers," Woll wrote. "I think I speak the mind of our people when I say that unions cannot admit governmental participation and control."

Calls It Fascism.

Such would be, he went on, a contradiction, if the widest latitude of self-government were to be allowed. The forceful measures suggested by the General would destroy self-government and bring the whole structure of industry under the domination of a state that would have little to mark it apart from fascism, he said.

Woll also took issue with Johnson on strikes. The unions can not agree "that strikes are, as the general said, 'economic sabotage,'" he wrote. "We do not want strikes. We have urged our unions to use the strike only as a last resort Stoppage of work should be, we all agree, the final resort when oppression becomes unbearable and when all other agencies fail."

Code Violation Blamed.

Woll went on to blame present strikes on code violation

"Today's strikes, few in number relatively, as Gen. Johnson himself agrees, are in the main the result of violation of code provisions," his letter said. "If codes agreed to are observed and enforced, we will usher in a condition in which strikes shall be no more than as the shadow of a hand, promising not more, but fewer and fewer strikes. But not in any single code has there been developed a proper and adequate method of adjusting with justice the industrial disputes of the industry. Consequently there will be strikes and the labor movement will put no bar in the way of a union that fights for justice.

"Today the harmful strikes are those of employers, refusing to obey more than easy code conditions."

Johnson Holds Stand Is Plain.

Gen. Johnson was represented by intimate associates yesterday as feeling that his Federation of Labor speech was itself a complete statement of his viewpoint toward points of criticism raised by Woll.

Gen. Johnson, it was explained, did not care to comment directly on matters dealt with in an exchange of communications between two other persons, but it was indicated he did not feel his speech was open to misinterpretation. It was pointed out, however, that Gen. Johnson emphasized in his speech that he was expressing only personal opinions.

Crack Limited Stops As Stork Brings Girl

Adrian, Mo., Oct. 15 (AP).—Trainmen of the Missouri Pacific's Sunflower Special yielded to the stork and made an unscheduled stop of 45 minutes in Adrian today.

An infant daughter was born to Mrs. Susie Johnson, 24, of Joplin, Mo. A doctor, summoned to officiate, said mother and child were doing well when the run to St. Louis was resumed.

Billion in Federal Loans Will Release Bank Deposits; Board Named by Roosevelt

Institutions Shut Since Jan. 1 Will Receive Swift Help.

Merriam Picked To Direct Relief

Liquidation Will Cover Up to 50 Per Cent of Frozen Assets.

A Deposit Liquidation Board to free $1,000,000,000 deposits in closed State and national banks throughout the country was announced last night by President Roosevelt.

Creation of a governmental agency to release at least half the deposits tied up in closed banks was forecast exclusively in The Washington Post a week ago. Such a release is considered a major item in the President's plans to give business a vigorous boost.

The board, the President announced, will lend approximately $1,000,000,000 on the assets of closed banks. Funds will be furnished by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Loans Up to 50 Per Cent.

Loans will be made to banks up to a maximum of 50 per cent of their deposits, including distributions already made. The amount of loans, however, will be governed by assets. Where assets are worth less than 50 per cent of deposits, only that amount will be lent, depositors getting only their share in the remaining assets.

The board will cooperate with Treasury, the Comptroller of the Currency, and the Deposit Insurance Corporation.

A special division in the RFC, headed by C. B. Merriam, a corporation director, will make the advances. Serving on the liquidation board will be Jesse H. Jones, R. F. C. chairman; Dean C. Acheson, Undersecretary of the treasury; Lewis W. Douglas, director of the budget; J. F. T. O'Connor, comptroller of the Currency, and Walter J. Cummings, chairman of the Deposit Insurance Corporation.

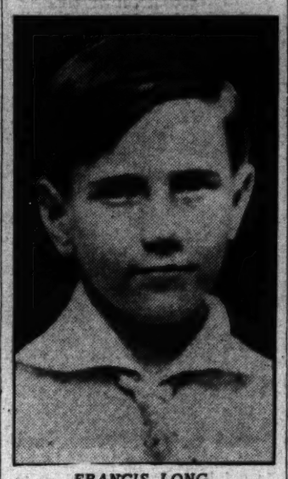

President Seeks Speed.

The President said in a formal statement: The object of establishing this Deposit Liquidation Division and trying to stimulate the distribution of frozen bank assets is first, to place money in the hands of depositors with the least possible delay, and, second, to bring about more orderly liquidation of the assets of closed banks. This will prevent dumping of assets at sacrifice prices."

The Treasury has figured that

FRANCIS LONG, 12, Post carrier boy, whose body was found yesterday floating in the Washington Channel. The youngster had been mysteriously missing since Tuesday.

Post Carrier Death Hinted As Murder

Body of Boy Missing Since Tuesday Found in River.

The body of Francis Long, 12-year-old altar boy at the Church of the Immaculate Conception, who had been missing since Tuesday was found yesterday in the Washington Channel, giving rise to the belief he had been waylaid and murdered.

Francis, a Post newsboy, was making his collections when last seen. Less than a year ago he was attacked by ruffians, robbed of his collection money, and left unconscious in an alley.

His father, J. J. Long, of 1313 Tenth street northwest, refused to entertain the suggestion of police that he might have committed suicide.

"My son has been murdered," he said.

Was Regular Boy.

Brother Michael, who taught young Long in school, said: "That boy would never commit suicide. He was a regular boy, who played hard and had no eccentricities."

"Only the day of his disappearance, I had to stop him from playing basket ball in the gymnasium so he could go home to help his mother with some work."

Detective Sergeant Walter S. Beck, of homicide squad, is of the opinion the death was either one of suicide or accident. He said there were no marks on the boy's body to indicate violence.

Acting Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald will perform an autopsy today. The elder Long said he found a lump on the boy's head, indicating he had been struck, or his body had been struck by a boat.

Canoe Offers Clew.

Dr. MacDonald after a superficial examination said: "There are no apparent marks of violence on the body. It was in an advanced stage of decomposition. A layman viewing it, might mistake the marks of decomposition as indicative of violence."

The only clew for an accident theory is a green canoe, found in the channel Thursday at the point where the body was found. The owner is being sought by police.

His mother, sleepless since her son disappeared, scoffed at the idea that the boy had gone alone to the waterfront.

"Francis feared the water," she said. "He could not swim. He was taken there by someone. He did not go alone."

Neighbor Overhears Boys.

A neighbor of Mrs. Long informed her that she had overheard three colored boys talking Thursday. One of them declared "we did a good job this time and we are glad of it," she said.

Mrs. Long sent her son, Joseph, with the neighbor to see if she could identify the boys, but the child was afraid.

Frank Nightingale, owner of a houseboat, saw the lifeless form in the water. He called harbor police and Sergt. E. K. Shelton and Private Carl Spring recovered the body.

The body evidently had been in the water several days. When found, he was clad in a white shirt, dark tie, a white slipover sweater, blue serge trousers, a black belt and black oxford shoes.

Police Search Abandoned.

When he failed to appear Tuesday night, his parents became alarmed, fearing that he had been waylaid again. Policemen searched the alleys along his route, several days. The search then was abandoned.

His parents said he had received money from only one customer on Tuesday night. There was no money in his pockets when searched at the Morgue.

Francis would have been 13 years old tomorrow. In addition to his mother and father, he is survived by three brothers, John, 15; Joseph, 11, and a 9-year-old sister, Marie.

Jesse C. Love Killed, 2 Hurt In Auto Crash

Jesse C. Love, 66, proprietor of the Point to Point Riding Academy, Forty-fifth and Lowell streets northwest, was fatally injured yesterday in a collision of automobiles at Massachusetts and Nebraska avenues northwest.

Love suffered several fractured ribs and internal injuries. He died in Emergency Hospital. The driver with him, Arthur Adams, 32, of 1120 Vermont avenue, also was taken to Emergency. He received three fractured ribs.

Their machine struck the car of Louis J. Hammell, 32, of 4811 Davenport street northwest. Hammell was taken to Georgetown Hospital with an injured neck, fractured ribs, severe lacerations and bruises.

Love was a native of North Carolina. He was widely known as a horse fancier and conducted one of the most popular riding schools in Washington. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Eva S. Love, and a niece, Miss Kathleen Love.

Operation Is Fatal To Inazo Nitobe

Victoria, B. C., Oct. 15 (AP).—Dr. Inazo Nitobe, Japanese statesman, who has been ill here for the last month, died here tonight after an operation.

Dr. Nitobe contracted pneumonia a month ago while en route home to Japan from the Pacific relations conference at Banff.

Dr. Nitobe reached the most dramatic point in his career when he told the League of Nations Japan had decided to quit the league, following the report of its commission censuring the island empire for its invasion of Manchuria and creation of the State of Manchukuo.

After representing his country at Geneva in 1932, he became chairman of the Japan National Council of the Institute of Pacific Relations, and headed a delegation to the institute's sessions at Banff, Alta., in 1933.

U. S. on Trail Of Kidnapers Holding Heir

Agents Hunt Student Gone Since Friday; Note Demands $5,000.

Chicago, Oct. 15 (U.P.).—A wealthy 31-year-old student tonight was believed to be the victim of the first major kidnaping in this region since the Federal Government started its drive to stamp out the abduction racket.

Government agents and police of Chicago, Freeport and Forest Park were investigating the disappearance of William Walton Hall, law student, heir to part of a $200,000 estate and treasurer and part owner of the Sea Dog Inn, a gay rendezvous for yachting folk.

Wife Reveals Threats.

His wife, Julia, reported yesterday that she had received word from the kidnapers and disclosed that prior to her husband's disappearance he had received at least four threatening letters.

One item in particular mystified police. It was that only $5,000 had been demanded. Ordinarily, ransom demands are much higher.

Melvin H. Purvis, of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, took charge of the case. He and police of the three cities said they expected further word tonight from the kidnapers.

Family Prominent.

Hall's family has been prominent in Freeport for 75 years, his father having founded the largest store there. His present home is in Forest Park, a fashionable suburb.

The Sea Dog Inn is located near the mouth of the Chicago River. It is difficult to reach except by boat.

One theory which authorities advanced tonight was that youthful acquaintances of Hall had kidnaped him. The low ransom demand was attributed to the fact that the kidnapers were amateurs.

Projector Burned As Film Explodes

Picture Show Patrons Make Exits Quietly.

R. V. Pollard, 56, projection operator at the Stanton Park Theater, Sixth street and Massachusetts avenue northeast, suffered severe burns to his face and hands yesterday, when a roll of film exploded, sending nearly 200 patrons hurrying toward exits. Order was maintained by ushers.

Officials said the fire was caused by a short circuit. Pollard was taken to Casualty Hospital. His condition is not serious.

Oklahoma Storm Kills 3 of Family

Girl Alone Escapes; Stock, Crops Destroyed.

Sayre, Okla., Oct. 15 (AP).—Three persons were killed and another seriously injured by a tornado 9 miles Southeast of here today.

Frank Yandell, 77, a farmer, his wife, 74, and his great-grandson, Luther Lawrance, 9, were killed. Nadine Lawrance, 7, was injured. Neighbors found the victims' bodies 200 yards from where the house had stood. Nadine was in the arms of Mrs. Yandell.

Two farmhouses were damaged, cattle and chickens killed and crops destroyed in an area a mile long and 100 yards wide.

Dakota Wheat Embargo Near

Grand Forks, N. Dak., Oct. 15 (AP).—Gov. William Langer said today he would "in all probability" issue an embargo on shipments on spring wheat, its principal crop, from North Dakota tomorrow.

The governor asserted a definite decision on the move, which he said he hoped would be a step toward obtaining higher prices for the grain by withholding it from markets, will be made on his return to Bismarck tomorrow. In the meantime, certain legal phases of the contemplated action are being studied.

He will ascertain how much of the grain now is in transit before setting an effective time for the proclamation.

The governor will act under authority granted him by a law passed by the 1933 Legislature which would permit him to declare an embargo on any agricultural product shipment which was deemed to be selling below the cost of production.

"The NRA is away ahead of farm prices," Gov. Langer said. "The NRA is going to collapse out here unless farm prices can somehow keep step. The embargo is a stern means, but about the only one available at the moment from this end."

The dear old farm, with its wrinkles removed and its lean spots rounded out, will start beckoning to the city worker and factory laborer pretty soon, unless plans go absolutely awry.

At least, that is Col. Louis McHenry Howe's idea about it all. Visions of idyllic settlements with possible cows in possible community pastures swept dulcetly into the ether last night as the President's secretary was "interviewed" by Walter Trumbull in a weekly radio presentation.

Obviously, it wasn't the farm where:

"The milk's just as blue as the sky ought to be
And the coffee's so weak you would think it was tea."

It wasn't that type of the dear old farm Col. Howe was talking about. In reply to Mr. Trumbull's prompting, Col. Howe told easy-chair listeners about the Government's project for rural communities for industrial workers, where the populace wanting to get back to good old mother earth could get right out in the dirt and dig.

But the old oaken bucket! That hoary symbol of the rural life will have no place in 1934's industrial farm centers.

The communities, Col. Howe related, were of three classes, each of which could send the old oaken bucket into sepulchral flipflops.

One is to be composed of farms surrounding a factory, where some members of the family can spin in the factory while others toil in the field.

Another will be established on the edges of cities, where urban employment will be available, when, if and as it is found. The third will be rural communities without any factory, with the cultivators growing products, yet to be

Glider Loops 68 Times for Record

Akron, Ohio, Oct. 15 (AP).—A total of 68 loops, claimed to be a new world's record for gliders, was set here today by Willis Sperry, of Akron, in a looping contest.

Bud Sutherland, who raced with Sperry, completed 63 loops. Glider pilots said the old record is 46. The two motorless craft were towed up 10,000 feet by an airplane.

France Balks At Lone Move Against Reich

Plans to Act Only With Allies if Germany Should Re-Arm.

Paris, Oct. 15 (U.P.).—A foreign office spokesman said tonight that France would act only in concert with other former allies—the United States, Great Britain and Italy—in any effort to keep Germany from rearming, and would take no action alone.

"The situation is not immediately critical, but it may be admitted that it has become seriously aggravated," the spokesman said.

The French generally regard Germany's withdrawal from the world arms conference and the League of Nations as turning the recently signed four-power peace pact of Rome into another "scrap of paper." The treaty provided action through the league.

Premier Edouard Daladier, in conference all Sunday with government leaders, refused to be rushed into hasty action of comment on Germany's action, despite the clamor of the French press. He may reply to Chancellor Adolf Hitler's radio speech last night when he opens parliament Tuesday.

(Associated Press.)

A foreign office official said today that war fears have been rearoused by yesterday's speech of Chancellor Hitler of Germany, but that "we are calm."

Most of the deputies, none of whom wished to be quoted directly, believe another war will be inevitable unless some means of conciliation, not at present clear, are found.

Officials scouted the benefits of direct negotiation between Germany and France as a trap prepared by Hitler to isolate France.

The French press generally saw Germany's actions as freeing France's hand in respect to armaments and the newspapers today stressed the importance of Franco-British-American solidarity.

The Journal said: "The Franco-Anglo-American front will be closer than ever."

Solidarity Sought.

The Volonte said: "The procedure of the Reich can only cement our solidarity with England and the United States."

Five courses, all of which were felt to be unsatisfactory, were variously suggested, as follows:

Prepare a disarmament pact which Germany would be told to sign or stand alone in the world and take the consequences.

Invoke the four-power pact.

Call the council of five powers—France, England, United States, Italy and Germany.

Belgium Would Prepare.

Brussels, Belgium, Oct. 15 (U.P.). The Etoile Belge commented today that Germany's action in quitting the arms conference made it imperative that Belgium hasten the strengthening of her national defenses.

Counseling a firm attitude, the newspaper said Belgium must not be frightened by the "Teutonic thundering," adding: "Hitler, in defying the world, has signed his own death warrant."

Prague, Czechoslovakia, Oct. 15 (U.P.).—The press today commented that Germany has "shed the last remnants of her peaceful mask."

The Venkov, in a typical editorial, said: "This is perhaps preferable to the previous situation, since it affords clarity. Berlin has thundered—but that does not necessarily mean that a storm must follow."

'Unloaded' Shotgun Badly Wounds Girl

Youth Didn't Know It Was Loaded; Victim May Die.

Brunswick, Me., Oct. 15 (AP).—Hazel Pinkham, 20, of Harpswell is in a hospital here today critically wounded by a shotgun blast fired by Lindoll Wallace, 18, who "didn't know it was loaded."

Her young brother had replaced a shell in the gun after shooting at a bird while the three were walking in the woods. Wallace pointed the weapon in fun at the girl and pulled the trigger.

Hospital attaches said she had little chance to recover.

Soviet Press Charges Nazis Seek Baltic Base

Moscow, Oct. 15 (U.P.).—Vigorous charges that German Nazis were financially and otherwise supporting Fascist movements in Baltic countries, allegedly as a war base against Soviet Russia, were featured in the government-controlled press here today.

The newspaper Izvestia outlined the Fascist struggle for power in Esthonia, Latvia and Finland, adding that "the threads lead to Berlin."

Jugoslavian Newspaper Says Nazis Want War

Belgrade, Jugosyavia, Oct. 15 (AP). Government officials were silent and the Jugoslavian press also refrained from commenting today on the withdrawal of Germany from the League of Nations and the Disarmament Conference.

The newspaper, Pravda, however, published comment from foreign capitals under the headline, "Entire World Opinion Flails Germany. Germany Wants War."

France Keeps Army Ready in New Crisis

Belfort, France, Oct. 15 (AP).—Minister of Pensions Edmond Miellet in an address here today said there will be no further reduction in military credits for France, in view of the situation caused by Germany's withdrawal from the league and the arms conference.

Britain's Chief Tackles Arms Parley Crisis

MacDonald in Contact With Geneva; War Held Far Off.

London, Oct. 15 (AP).—Premier MacDonald returned to No. 10 Downing street earlier than usual tonight from Chequers, where he spent the week-end, and prepared to guide Great Britain through the critical days resulting from Germany's break with the League of Nations and the arms parley.

Simon to Remain.

The three cabinet ministers decided that the foreign minister should remain in Geneva in the event of a full conference meeting tomorrow.

British official quarters still remained under MacDonald's edict of silence. Unofficially, political circles discussed the Hitler speech, commenting that it was not so bad as it could have been, but that such conciliatory utterances as Hitler made failed to compensate for Germany's action.

Holds War Far Off.

The most authoritative view of the situation and one likely to have weight in Cabinet circles was made available by Sir Thomas Inskip, attorney general of the National government, who said:

"I feel that war is a good way off yet and that the league is the greatest factor toward obtaining world peace."

Sir Thomas said the league would survive Germany's departure just the same as it had done the departure of Japan, but that there was no doubt the league would be weaker.

Hungary Acts On Hitler Bolt

Cryptic Statement Leads to Rumor Nation Also May Quit League.

Budapest, Hungary, Oct. 15 (AP). Premier Julius Goemboes and Koloman von Kanya, minister of foreign affairs, conferred today with the cabinet of Hungary and "took decisions," growing out of Germany's withdrawal from the League of Nations and the disarmament conference.

This cryptic communique, issued after the meeting, resulted in the spread of rumors that Hungary also is quitting the league.

The communique said decisions were reached in connection with "measures which the Hungarian government deems necessary as a result of Germany's withdrawal from the league and the disarmament conference."

Polish Organ Fears Effect of Hitler Bolt

Warsaw, Poland, Oct. 15 (AP). The semiofficial Gazeta Polska, commenting on Germany's withdrawal from the League of Nations, in an article entitled "The Fiction's End," asserted the chapter of peace negotiations since the Treaty of Versailles has ended.

The newspaper said that in practice nothing would change, but that psychologically much would change, since it had become clear that Germany openly desired to proceed with armaments.

"Lies!" Is Indian Director's Answer

Hummer Denies Charges of Interior Department.

Canton, S. Dak., Oct. 15 (AP).—Dr. H. R. Hummer, director of the Federal Asylum for Indians here, today denied charges from Washington against his institution.

The Interior Department charged in a statement yesterday that "perfectly sane Indians" are confined in the asylum and that conditions were "intolerable." The accusations were made after an investigation by Dr. S. A. Silk, of Washington.

"Lies, all lies," said Dr. Hummer. "Anybody can come here and see conditions for themselves. We have nothing to hide. We want to get this thing in the open and see what's behind it."

Dr. Hummer intimated that "politics" was behind the charges. He added he was considering asking a congressional investigation.

Roosevelt's Bank Aid Text

Declares Board Will Speed Loans on Assets to Free Frozen Deposits in National and State Institutions, Aided by R. F. C.

The following is the text of President Roosevelt's statement on the plan to lend money to closed banks:

There will be established in the Reconstruction Finance Corporation a special division to make loans to closed banks. The head of this division will be C. B. Merriam, a member of the board of directors of the corporation.

In order that this division may work in close cooperation with the Treasury Department, the Comptroller of the Currency and the Deposit Insurance Corporation, it will be administered by a deposit liquidation board consisting of the following:

1. C. B. Merriam, the head of the Deposit Liquidation board.
2. Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the board of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.
3. Dean G. Acheson, Undersecretary of the Treasury.
4. Lewis W. Douglas, Director of the Budget.
5. J. F. T. O'Connor, Comptroller of the Currency.
6. Walter J. Cummings, chairman of the Deposit Insurance Corporation.

Liquidation Hastened.

The purpose of the deposit liquidation division will be to stimulate and encourage liquidating agents of banks closed after January 1, 1933, to borrow from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation in order that funds may be made available to depositors as quickly as possible.

The general intention is to make loans on the assets of closed banks for the benefit of depositors up to a maximum of 50 per cent of their deposits, inclusive of distributions heretofore made. This does not, of course, mean that in a bank whose remaining assets are worth less, that the depositors will get 50 per cent.

They will get in such a case only their share in the remaining assets. It is not intended that such distribution will be uniform, but that they will be limited to the orderly liquidation value of assets on which loans can be made, reserving only what will appear sufficient to pay taxes, expenses and interest during the liquidation period.

Hinges on Assets.

In some cases further distributions will not be possible because assets remaining in the banks will not warrant any further dividends than those heretofore made. Distributions in any case will be possible only to the amounts of the loanable value of the assets which have not already been pledged or otherwise disposed of.

In cases where the condition of the closed bank will justify it, proper consideration will be given to a larger distribution than 50 per cent. More than one distribution will be made as, and if, assets improve in value.

The object of establishing this deposit liquidation division and trying to stimulate the distribution of frozen bank assets is: first, to place money in the hands of depositors with the least possible delay, and second, to bring about more orderly liquidation of the assets of closed banks. This will prevent dumping of assets at sacrifice prices.

Appraisal Committees.

Special advisory and appraisal committees will be organized throughout the country to speed the appraisal of closed bank assets where such appraisals have not already been made by Government agencies. These committees organized for the appraisal and recommendation of these loans will be recruited from representative local bankers, businessmen and farmers.

It is estimated that the maximum available loanable value of the assets of banks closed during the year 1933 will not exceed $1,000,000,000, and it is hoped that the distribution will approximate that amount.

The exact amount that can be distributed will be governed by the appraisal of the actual assets of each closed bank. Until that appraisal is made the amount involved can not be more accurately stated.

R. F. C. to Provide Funds.

Funds for the liquidation of deposits will be supplied by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. These funds may be supplemented later by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

I am particularly anxious that this matter be handled with dispatch and to that end solicit the cooperation of all who may have official or other authority in connection with any closed bank.

The United States Government has authority over closed national banks and can speed up distribution in those banks if those directly interested will cooperate, but the Government is without authority over closed State banks.

If delays occur in the case of State banks, they will be due to reasons beyond the control of the National Government.

Bomb Suspect Clears Self

Sleuths Hunt Vainly for Explosion Clews in Disaster.

Department of Justice investigators last night sought vainly for clews to support their theory that a nitroglycerin bomb was responsible for the explosion of a United Air Lines transport plane, with the loss of seven lives, near Chesterton, Ind., Tuesday.

After turning avidly to search for a passenger who was reported to have placed a brown paper-covered package in the plane just before it left the Newark airport, word was relayed from that city by the Associated Press that investigators had cleared him of suspicion. He had left the plane at Cleveland, it was reported.

Though officials of the United Air Lines refused to discuss the explosion theory or Federal investigation, the belief was expressed at the Newark airport that if explosive was responsible for the disaster, it might have been placed inside a compartment behind the rear cabin. The copilot or hostess easily could have fatally jarred such a bomb in reaching into the compartment for blankets to ward off the night chill.

Home of Winkler's Widow Burglarized

Chicago, Oct. 15 (AP).—Burglars broke into the apartment of Mrs. Georgette Winkler, widow of Gus Winkler, while she was in St. Louis attending his funeral, town hall police were informed tonight.

They said a loss of 10 sable furs, valued at $3,000 was reported.

Hitler Action Wins Plaudits Of Austrians

Dollfuss-Nazi Animosity Forgotten While Press Lauds League Break.

Vienna, Oct. 15 (AP).—The touchy, barbed-wire attitude characterizing Austro-German relations in recent months was conspicuously lacking today in comments of the pro-government Austrian press concerning Germany's withdrawal from world council chambers.

Never since the outbreak of the Dollfuss-Hitler hostilities has the semi-official Reichspost printed such warm expressions of sympathy for Germany. Only in anti-government Socialist quarters was Hitler's "assassination of world peace" bitterly assailed.

The Socialist Der Tag flatly accused Germany of preparing a bacteriological war in its laboratories and organizing a "march against the disunited civilized world."

Dollfuss Is Calm.

Watchful waiting characterized the government's attitude. Chancellor Englebert Dollfuss demonstrated he was not excessively agitated over developments by spending the week-end in the country according to previous plans.

Vice Chancellor Emil Fey likewise carried out a scheduled opening of barracks for the Fascist guard as Bisamberg. In a brief address, he touched on the German action, saying:

"It is not yet possible to estimate the character of important consequences of this move."

There was eager interest in official quarters in learning whether Italy had previous knowledge of the Hitler action. Austria's attitude is largely dependent upon this point.

"Mighty Echo" Predicted.

While not disguising its doubt as to the expediency of Germany's withdrawing from the League, Dollfuss' 'Reichspost emphasized "there is no doubt that the German government's very effective appeal will awaken in the great majority of the German people a mighty echo."

The pernicious regularity with which the victor nations continued to postpone fulfillment of their promise at Versailles to disarm, while at the same time insisting that Germany remain defenseless, "was becoming constantly more unbearable," the paper said.

The progovernment Freiepresse likewise remarked that the league's fatal blunders were becoming boomerangs, and finally avenging themselves on the league. It said:

"Even those completely unsympathetic toward national socialism can not blind themselves to the facts: There has been blunder after blunder. There was neither courage enough honestly to adjourn nor courage enough honestly to get together."

Socialists Warn of War.

The Socialist press called Hitler's speech a "declaration of war against Europe." The Arbeiter Sonntag scathingly said of Hitler's appeal to the German people: "There is no such thing as a German people; there are only soldiers for the coming war."

Evidence of a friendlier feeling for Germany in official circles was viewed with particular alarm by the Socialists. Leon Blum, leading French Socialist, who attended an international meeting here to consider protection for the Austrian working man, said before his sudden departure yesterday that "we realize there is danger of Italian and German Fascism reaching an accord at the expense of the Austrian and international proletariat, and this danger of understanding between the Fascists must inevitably lead to a frightful sharpening of danger of war in Europe."

D. C. Residents Hurt in Crash

3 Cars Collide; 1 Driver, Pinned in Flaming Wreck, Escapes.

Danville, Pa., Oct. 14 (AP).—Eleven persons were hurt when three automobiles collided near Danville today. One driver was extricated with a crowbar from his flaming car.

The injured include Miss Antoinette Hardisty, 38, Lanham, Md., contusions on the body; Miss Jean Taylor, 1732 K street northwest, Washington, D. C., lacerations of the scalp and chin and possible skull fracture; Walter Hardisty, Lanham, contusions and possible fracture of several ribs; Mrs. Mary Hardisty, Lanham, possible fracture of the right wrist; W. A. Rice, Washington, injured right knee, chest and face; Emanuel L. Buehler, 1024 East Ogden avenue, Milwaukee, Wis., minor injuries on face. Rice and Buehler left a hospital after treatment.

Police said Miss Hardisty, driving a large roadster with five occupants, attempted to pass the small coupe of Buehler and crashed into a sedan driven by Thomas Lowry, of Chinchilla, Pa.

The sedan caught fire, with Lowry pinned in the wreckage. A crowbar, obtained from a nearby farmhouse, was used to free him, while other motorists extinguished the flames.

Hynes Takes Feeney's Place as Miners' Chief

Pittsburgh, Oct. 15 (AP).—Appointment of William Hynes as "provisional" president of District No. 4 of the United Mine Workers of America, replacing William Feeney in the "storm center" of the soft coal strike, was announced tonight by Phillip Murray, international vice president.

The bombing of a welfare relief station, formerly used by the newly organized Miners Brotherhood Union in Fayette County, alone broke the week-end calm in western Pennsylvania's strike-weary coal fields.

Slain Holdup Suspect's Costly Property Sold

Chicago, Oct. 15 (AP).—While Federal authorities were reported closing in on the actual bandits involved in the $250,000 Loop mail holdup last December, furnishings in the luxurious home of the late Edgar B. Lebensberger were sold today at a private auction.

Lebensberger's body was found 10 days ago with a bullet in the head shortly before it was revealed he had been indicted in connection with disposal of loot from the robbery.

Soviets Pledge Peace Efforts Will Continue

Council Head Tells Briton Disarmament Goal Still Sought.

Moscow, Oct. 15 (AP).—The Soviet government's intention to continue its efforts toward real disarmament was stated tonight in a telegram sent by Vyascheslaff Molotoff, president of the council of commissars, to Lord Robert Cecil, of Great Britain, at Geneva.

The telegraph message was in answer to Lord Robert's request for an expression of opinion from the Soviets in connection with the meeting today of an international group for a discussion of disarmament.

"For more than 10 years the Soviet government has been independent of rapidly changing international conditions," the message said. "It has not failed to propose general disarmament as a real guarantee of peace.

"Now, when the menace to peace is really perceived by all populations, the Soviet government more than at any time before is convinced that complete or maximum disarmament is necessary to reduce this menace, and it is sure this necessity is quite obvious to other countries.

"Pursuing a quite independent policy, the Soviet government continues to support all proposals aiming at real disarmament. Moreover, such proposals are among those advanced by the Soviet government itself, including abandonment of the most aggressive kinds of armaments in air, sea and land forces."

Loans by Nation To Free Deposits

about $2,495,000,000 is tied up in closed banks. Freeing of half of this is regarded by the President as providing a powerful stimulus to business by releasing a flood of buying power at a time it is vitally needed.

Pointing out that the Federal Government has authority only over national banks and was willing to speed up distribution in such banks, the President said that cooperation of those directly interested was necessary. The Government, he said, has no authority in State banks.

"If delays occur in the case of State banks, they will be due to reasons beyond control of the National Government," he said.

Assets Will Decide.

While the board will make loans on assets of closed banks up to a maximum of 50 per cent of their deposits, the President said "this does not mean that in a bank in which remaining assets are worth less, depositors will get 50 per cent."

"They will get in such case only their share in the remaining assets," he declared.

"It is not intended that such distribution will be uniform, but that they will be limited to the orderly liquidation value of assets on which loans can be made, reserving only what will appear sufficient to pay taxes, expenses and interest during the liquidation period.

"In some cases further distributions will not be possible because assets remaining in the bank will not warrant any further dividends than those heretofore made.

Limit May Be Higher.

"Distribution in any case will be possible only to the amounts of the loanable value of the assets which have not already been pledged or otherwise disposed of.

"In cases where the condition of the closed bank will justify it, proper consideration will be given to a larger distribution than 50 per cent. More than one distribution will be made as and if assets improve in value."

While initial funds for the board will come from the R. F. C., it was indicated the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation may add more later.

It was stated the "exact amount" to be distributed will depend on appraisal of actual assets of each bank closed since last January 1. It was estimated, however, that the maximum available loanable value of the assets of banks closed this year will not exceed $1,000,000,000 and "it is hoped distribution will approximate that amount."

Advisory Groups.

Mr. Jones said the statement should clear the public mind on the amount of money that could be freed from closed banks.

"Reports have mentioned the figure at $4,000,000,000 or $5,000,000,000, but this is just not in the cards," he said.

To speed the appraisal of closed bank assets, special advisory and appraisal committees will be organized from representative local bankers, business men and farmers, it was stated.

The President's statement was the second move within two days to bolster banking in the Nation. Saturday he studied with Chairman Jones and New York banking authorities a scheme for purchase by the R. F. C. of preferred stock in banks to help them qualify for the deposit insurance protection, effective January 1 next.

succeeded in defeating the project to bury the conference.

Davis insisted that the grave world situation required mature reflection, and eventually won over all the representatives to recommending merely a short recess.

There were some indications that in view of what seemed to be the pacific nature of portions of Chancellor Hitler's address, an effort will be made to prevent Germany's break with the league at this time and possibly also from the disarmament conference.

Italian Sentiment.

During the hotel conference an Italian delegate brought in an Italian press communique recommending adjournment of the arms session. It stated the German resignation would have grave repercussions, but that Hitler's speech did not close the door and showed a will for peace. Hence, the conference must be suspended and conditions found for a new examination of problems.

The French deemed this as inclined to back up Hitler. They are openly opposed to any four-power conference plus the United States.

Another indication of how much Europe is agitated was seen in the reported fact that Sir John Simon received two telephone calls from Prime Minister MacDonald.

Davis Cabling Washington.

Ambassador Davis was cabling heavily to Washington. Secretary of State Hull's reported statement concerning Germany's responsibility was widely commented upon as the most outspoken declaration of any that has been made.

Davis adopted a policy that this is mainly Europe's problem and America seeks only to advance the cause of disarmament and will do all that is possible to help.

It was reported the Italians, who feel that the conference under the aegis of the league is dead, will seek to revive five-power conversations outside the league.

Included among the points which Boncour was fighting was a proposal to the arms conference of a formal resolution which would define Germany's responsibility for the existing crisis.

Feared Another Bombshell.

This failed to receive general approval because of the bombshell effect of the proposed resolution concerning Germany considered a few days ago, which was transformed into a diplomatic report made by Sir John Simon.

The general sense of the meeting was that nothing should be done to make the world's political situation worse.

Germany was subjected to a bitter attack by speakers before a huge peace manifestation tonight. The meeting passed a resolution expressing its "earnest desire for a successful issue of the disarmament conference."

Lord Cecil, of England, heading the battery of orators, declared to the crowd which packed the Hall of the Reformation, that failure of the conference, would, perhaps, "irretrievably wreck world peace."

Flatly Accuses Germany.

He flatly accused Germany of obstructing disarmament.

"It is no exaggeration to say," he declared, "that if the disarmament conference fails war will be brought definitely nearer."

Brief messages of greetings from President Roosevelt, Prime Minister McDonald, and other statesmen were read at the beginning of the meeting.

Mr. Davis did not attend, so completely fagged was he after hours of almost continuous conference.

"Buck Passers" In Relief Hit By President

Reiterates Responsibility of Local and State Agencies.

(Associated Press.)

President Roosevelt last night assailed "buck passers" who leave it all to the Government in providing relief for the needy and appealed to all to give to local relief organizations.

Opening hte four weeks' charity drive of the 1933 mobilization for human needs in an address from the White House, Mr. Roosevelt reemphasized his position that local and State responsibility comes first in the relief program and said:

"A number—I am glad to say a small number—of people have written to me to express the thought that all relief work should be taken over by the Government, and have intimated that they would not feel any duty this year to subscribe to local relief or local charity.

Have Wrong Slant.

"These people have a wholly wrong slant on the fundamental basis of our American civilization. They deny the civic responsibility of the individual, and would seek to toss every problem into the lap of the Government. They are 'buck passers.'"

Newton D. Baker, Secretary of War during the world conflict, and chairman of the mobilization organization, spoke on the same program with the President.

"I am glad indeed that my old friend, Newton D. Baker, once more is heading the forces of mobilization and this time we are all happy that it is a mobilization of peace," the executive said.

He added the "fine teamwork in the recovery program can not be successful if an important horse is lying back in the traces."

Need Greater Than Ever.

While a "steadily growing reemployment of the unemployed" has taken many off relief rolls, he said, needs of those still on relief "is proportionately greater than it was before, and, in addition to the work of direct relief, it is necessary for us to continue our support of the permanent hospital and welfare services that exist in every county and in most communities."

The President reiterated the Government would not let anyone starve this winter, but said this policy was predicated on the assumption "that the individual American citizen will continue to do his and her part, even more unselfishly than in the past."

Wallace Ponders Sugar Industry Aid

Talks Stabilization Plans With Congressmen.

Plans were being worked out by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace and a group of Western and Southern senators and representatives yesterday for a "sugar division" in the Agricultural Adjustment Administration which would attempt to bring about stabilization of the sugar industry.

The proposal was made by Wallace after a conference with the Congressmen, at which the latter urged the Secretary to sign the proposed sugar stabilization agreement, or to give the Agriculture Department's plans for assisting the Western beet sugar industry.

Wallace indicated the proposed sugar division would exercise largely the functions assigned to the "sugar stabilization board" which it was proposed to set up under terms of the rejected stabilization agreement.

Nor will Farmer Bill, living in his community center, have to get up of a cold night and go out and start the windmill to get a drink. The wind-blown, Dakota-type farm, with its recalcitrant iron pump and other outdoor appurtenances, will give way in the Federal projects to model homes with electric pumps, septic tanks, running water and the like. The communities may have moving pictures, an entertainment hall and their own general stores.

Actually, Mr. Howe indicated, the visionary settlements will outskin famous Brook Farm by a mile or two. There may even be community cows. Certainly there will be a community pasture, but the managers of the scheme haven't decided yet whether to let families own their own live stock or to own it communally.

Homes and memberships in the communities will be sold on the 20-year payment plan. To date, it has been decided they can grow pyrethrum flowers for insecticide and linen for a rejuvenation of an American linen industry. These two crops, anyway, wouldn't compete with hard-pressed, genuine farmers, Mr. Howe figured. Several communities already are underway.

It was obvious, however, that when Mr. Howe was describing the farms he wasn't thinking about the good old farm song that ends:

"If you want to get fat, just stay in your flat;
Dodge the dear old farm."

10 Projects Awaited In Prince Georges

Text of President's Relief Plea

Declares All Citizens Should Continue to Support Local Agencies; Reiterates Responsibility of Communities and States.

The following is the text of President Roosevelt's address delivered last night for the 1933 mobilization for human needs:

I have spoken on several occasions of the vital importance to our country that private charity in all that that broad term covers, must be kept up at least to the levels, and I hope even beyond the levels, of former years. At this opening of the four weeks 1933 mobilization for human needs, I want not only to reaffirm what I have said before, but to stress the fact that the fine teamwork in the recovery program can not be successful if an important horse is lying back in the traces.

It is true that I have declared that Government must not let anyone starve this winter. But at the same time this policy is predicated on the assumption that the individual American citizen will continue to do his and her part, even more unselfishly than in the past.

Many Still Need Help.

Let me stress that a great many people will still need the help of relief agencies this winter. It is true that because of a partial, but, I believe, a steadily growing, reemployment of the unemployed, many families and many individuals have been taken off the local relief rolls. But, on the other hand, the needs of those who are still on the rolls is proportionately greater than it was before, and, in addition to the work of direct relief, it is necessary for us to continue our support of the permanent hospital and welfare services that exist in every county and in most communities.

A number—I am glad to say, a small number—of people have written to me to express the thought that all relief work should be taken over by the Government, and have intimated that they would not feel any duty this year to subscribe to local relief or local charity. These people have a wholly wrong slant on the fundamental basis of our American civilization. They deny the civic responsibility of the individual, and would seek to toss every problem into the lap of government. They are "buck passers."

On the other hand, the overwhelming majority of the American people understand clearly that it is first the duty of the individual and the local community to do all that they can to maintain relief and welfare; that it is then the obligation of the State government to supplement local efforts, and that finally if all of this put together is not sufficient, the Federal Government stands ready to help.

This mobilization for human needs will keep the long established hospital and welfare services going. These services existed long before the depression, they will exist long after the depression is over.

Pleads for Chests.

I ask every citizen to give his or her support to the Community Chests and to other organizations that raise funds for the regular welfare services—bodies which express the instincts of charity, of humanity, and of neighborliness. They are an essential to the whole American scheme of life. Their meaning is expressed in the name—the mobilization for human needs.

I am glad indeed that my old friend, Newton D. Baker, once more is heading the forces of mobilization and this time we are all happy it is a mobilization of peace.

Einstein Mute On U. S. Visit

Scientist, Slightly Ill on Ship, Answers No Questions.

Halifax, Nova Scotia, Oct. 15 (AP).—Busy with breakfast, Dr. Albert Einstein came back to America today with a studied silence and a keen interest in a soft-boiled egg.

The liner Westernland, bearing the professor from England to New York, stopped briefly in the harbor. Most of the passengers came ashore for a stroll, but Dr. Einstein stayed on the ship.

The scientist was indisposed, an attendant explained. He had not been feeling well for a week.

She was gone only a few minutes, however, when the scientist decided to go himself.

Dr. Einstein did not even look up from the table when visitors approached to see if he would answer a few questions, but Dr. Mayer was on his feet at once, explaining the professor's indisposition and silence.

Munich Throng Cheers Hitler At Ceremonies

Nazi Chief Lays Stone for "House of German Art" Amid Pageantry.

Munich, Germany, Oct. 15 (U.P.).—Chancellor Adolf Hitler participated in colorful ceremonies here today in connection with the laying of the cornerstone of the new "House of German Art."

The Chancellor made a brief speech, entirely nonpolitical, in which he said he was thankful he was permitted to live in "these great times" when fate had destined the Nazis to lift up the nation which "heretofore has been despondent without its rights."

The main event was a colorful pageant witnessed by silent thousands thronging the streets. Hitler watched from a grand stand near Odeonsplatz, where almost exactly 10 years ago his followers in the abortive Munich "Putsch" clashed with police.

The pageant was led by horsemen on white steeds, followed by drummers and blonde girls with garlands, red-gowned horsewomen, pages and flag bearers.

At the cornerstone laying ceremony, Hitler was handed a mallet by a Bavarian official, who asked the Chancellor to use it in all future cornerstone layings in which he participates. However, at Hitler's first stroke, the mallet broke. The Chancellor, apparently nonplused, walked back to his chair, while the crowd, failing to notice the mishap, sang "Deutschland Ueber Alles."

Capital Awaits Word on Hitler League Break

U. S. Stand Delayed by Lack of Reports From Envoys.

The State Department last night awaited reports from American envoys preliminary to formulating policies on the crisis precipitated by Germany's withdrawal from the disarmament conference and the League of Nations.

State officials were at a loss to understand the lack of reports from the American embassy at Berlin. Thirty-six hours after Chancellor Hitler announced Germany's withdrawal the department here had heard but little from Berlin.

Press dispatches from Geneva, however, said major powers had agreed to recommend recess of the arms parley for a brief period, but stood firm against a final adjournment. The State Department said Norman H. Davis, chief of the American delegation, had authority to join in such a recommendation without consulting his government.

Threat Is Recognized.

There was no disposition to minimize the threat to the disarmament conference presented by Germany's sudden action, but definite steps awaited information from abroad. Any American policy will be defined only after conferences with President Roosevelt, the department pointed out.

Secretary Hull, Assistant Secretary Jefferson Caffrey and Pierrepont Moffat, chief of the division of western Europe affairs, and an expert on disarmament, visited the department during the day. Contact was maintained with the White House.

It was felt, however, that Davis would intensify his efforts at Geneva to reconcile conflicting viewpoints. Certain points bearing on American policy were plain.

The United States is firmly opposed to present rearmament by any nation, and in this it stands with its one-time allies, notably France and Great Britain.

Favors Equality by Cuts.

It recognizes Germany's right to equality of armaments "in a system which would provide security for all nations," but believes equality should come by arms cuts instead of increases.

In endeavoring to bring this about it is employing diplomacy marked by careful consideration of the national feelings of Germany and other nations.

It was reported in some quarters that Premier Mussolini of Italy might lead efforts to reconcile conflicting views of Germany and the former allies.

Huge Problem Seen in Exiles

Reich Non-Aryans Face Black Future, Foreign Policy Group Charges.

(United Press.)

The position of all "non-Aryans" in Germany is "uncertain and precarious," the Foreign Policy Association charged last night.

"Aside from the humanitarian and social aspects of the situation, their economic future looks black," the association reported. "The younger generation of 'non-Aryans' will not only be unable to earn a livelihood, but the educational opportunities open to them even now are strictly limited. Many Jews as well as 'Marxists' are confined in camps and held incommunicado.

"Despite regulations requiring a special visa from Nazi authorities before any German may leave the Reich, large numbers of Jews, Liberals and 'Marxists' are refugees abroad. Many of them are without passports, and the severe restrictions have made it impossible for them to take what money they possess out of the Reich.

"These emigres are rapidly becoming a problem of international magnitude, which can be solved only by a competent international body such as the League of Nations."

Pirates' Battle With British Marines Proves Just a 'Dud'

All in Fun, Admiral Says in Explaining Natives' Alarm.

London, Oct. 15 (AP).—Vice Admiral James of the British Navy arrived aboard H. M. battle cruiser Hood at Banff today, and described the origin of rumors of a mutiny in the Navy last week as a sham-battle comedy.

Admiral James said part of hte fleet exercises consisted of miniature war games of the situations the Navy sometimes faces in the far-flung corners of the empire.

Four cutter-loads of seamen or Pirates were landed at Nigo in Cromarty Firth. The Hood and the battleship Renown then landed large parties of Marines to deal with them.

The Marines attacked the "pirates," rounded them up and took their captives to the boat.

The local inhabitants, said Admiral James, watched the maneuvers and it was believed their surprise at seeing the sailors realistically charged by the Marines with fixed bayonets started the mutiny story.

Borah Fears Another War In Reich Crisis

Declares Situation "Can Be Charged to No Single Nation."

Boise, Idaho, Oct. 15 (AP).—Senator William E. Borah (Republican), Idaho, said today "we are facing the possibility of another war" and—commenting on Germany's withdrawal from the arms conference and the League of Nations—the situation "can be charged to no single nation."

"It is the fruit of the policies of many nations," he said, appealing to the "victor nations" of the World War to "carry out the pledge made in the Versailles Treaty and disarm." He spoke at a public meeting called to indorse efforts of the Geneva conference.

"While the people everywhere are assembled in the cause of disarmament and peace," he said, "governments seem to be drifting toward war.

"Now we come to the period when nearly $5,000,000,000 are being expended by the victor nations for arms. We come to the period when we are actually facing the possibility of another war.

"I have said many times during the last 15 years that there would never be peace in Europe, never be disarmament until the Versailles Treaty was rewritten. It is to be hoped that those directly concerned will seek readjustment through peaceful means, but readjustment in some way must be had in the interest of peace."

30,000 Cheer as Macon Ends 70-Hour Voyage to Pacific

Dirigible in Storms Did "Magnificently," Says Commander.

Sunnyvale, Calif., Oct. 15 (AP).—The silvery-hued Macon, empress of all sky ships, came to her new home here today after spanning the Nation from Lakehurst, N. J., in 70 hours and 17 minutes.

While a brilliant sun reflected from her shimmering sides and 30,000 persons cheered, the giant Navy dirigible nosed slowly up to the mast and was made fast at 4:17 p. m.

Lines were thrown from the dirigible 300 yards south of the mast and these were connected by the ground crew to a line from the mast, to which the ship was slowly pulled by winches.

Pumping of ballast into the dirigible's tail to bring it down was immediately started.

The Macon sailed slowly over San Francisco and other bay cities before mooring here at Moffett Field, named for Rear Admiral William A. Moffett, whose life was lost in the crash off the Eastern coast of the Macon's ill-fated sister ship, the Akron.

Shortly after 5:30 p. m. the 785-foot dirigible was pushed into its hangar.

Commander A. H. Dresel said the 70-hour trip across the continent was without the slightest mishap and that the big craft responded "magnificently" in several storms.

McKee Jewish "Views" Flayed By Untermyer

Article Written Years Ago Draws Fire of Noted Lawyer.

New York, Oct. 15 (AP).—Joseph V. McKee, Independent mayoralty candidate, was attacked today by Samuel Untermyer, noted lawyer, over an old magazine article attributed to him in which the younger generation of Jews was said to lack a code of morals.

Untermyer, the city's financial adviser, who had remained neutral in the triangular campaign, called on McKee to "explain away" the statement, first hurled yesterday by Fiorello H. LaGuardia, Fusion nominee.

"No man is entitled to occupy the high office of mayor of this, the greatest Jewish-populated city of the world, who holds such narrow, bigoted views of so large a proportion of his fellow citizens," Untermyer said.

Blow at Tammany Seen.

Meanwhile campaign managers studied completed registration figures showing a voting list of 2,322,382 men and women, a total second only to that enrolled for last year's presidential election.

Anti-Tammany forces expressed pleasure at the near-record registration, interpreting it to indicate a popular uprising against the organization.

McKee said tonight that a reading of the whole article would show that no attack on the Jewish race or religion was intended.

He declined to comment on Untermyer's statement but charged that Laguardia "has deliberately, viciously and for self-gain brought the religious question into this campaign by misinterpreting the intent and spirit of a single paragraph in an article written almost 20 years ago."

G. O. P. Forces Rallied.

Republican leaders were reported to be assembling their forces actively behind LaGuardia and the remainder of the fusion ticket on the theory that a defeat for McKee would be a blow to the Roosevelt administration.

Although the White House has announced the President is keeping "hands off" the municipal campaign, the Republicans pointed to reports that Postmaster General Farley reputedly was an important factor in the launching of McKee's candidacy.

When the Ghost Walked.

I met a ghost the other night
And, oh, he was a grisly sight!
"You fill me with a fearful dread;
Now who are you, pale Ghost?" I said.

He eyed me with a ghoulish grin
And carefully replaced his chin;
Then gibbered in a woeful way—
"I am the Ghost of Guvment Pay."

Across his neck there was a slash;
(It surely was a frightful gash).
"'Twas through that cut—15 per cent—
My blood was nearly spent.

"And while I lay upon the slab,
They gave me many a furlough stab."
He showed me on his bony chest
Retirement cuts and all the rest.

"Poor Guvment Pay," I wept, "Poor shade!
However will you make the grade?"
"I'm going to join the NRA,"
He croaked, "before there's hell to pay."

League Raps Federal Officer Aiding McKee

Civil Service Group Asks Roosevelt to Order Help Halted.

Political activities of Harry M. Durning, collector of the Port of New York, on behalf of Joseph V. McKee, independent candidate for mayor of that city, were protested by the Civil Service Reform League in a letter sent yesterday to President Roosevelt.

Quoting press reports that Durning is acting as McKee's campaign manager, the league wrote:

"For a high Federal Government official to engage in any such important political capacity is not only questionable as to good taste and wisdom, but is in violation of the spirit if not the letter of the Civil Service act and rules.

Acting as manager of a political campaign is using one's authority for the purpose of interfering with an election or offecting the results thereof."

The President was requested to direct Durning to refrain from engaging actively in the campaign.

Coal Output for Week Reaches Record Low

Less bituminous coal was mined the week ended October 7 than during the corresponding week for many years.

Bureau of Mines yesterday estimated output for the six-day period at 5,630,000 tons, as compared with 6,876,000 tons the previous week and 7,255,000 tons during the corresponding week last year, according to the Associated Press. It was more than 5,000,000 tons less than production the corresponding week in 1929.

Student Kills Cuban Soldier, Rousing Army

Troopers Try to Take 4 in Jail After Shots End Youth's Feud.

Havana, Oct. 15 (AP).—Army excitement was revived when a student, Homero Valdes, shot and killed a soldier, Joaquin Camejo, on a street corner tonight.

Camejo was waiting for a bus when Valdes and three other students approached him in an automobile. Valdesa alighted and shot the soldier four times with a revolver. Camejo died instantly.

Soldiers and policemen arrested Valdes and his companions, who made no effort to escape.

A brother of the slain man said Joaquin killed Valdes' brother December 9, 1932, "in self-defense while carrying out his duty," and that Homero has been "gunning for Camejo" ever since.

Shortly after the four were arrested eight or ten heavily armed soldiers went to the police station, announcing their intention of killing the prisoners.

Three soldiers posted there and all available policemen surrounded the prisoners, drew their guns, and rushed them through the threatening soldiers into a police patrol wagon, which hurried them to Principe Prison.

Rumor Causes Welles Defense

State Department Claims Envoy Had No Part in Hotel Episode.

(Associated Press.)

The State Department yesterday asserted Ambassador Sumner Welles at Havana had no connection with the assembling of Cuban army officers at the National Hotel there, from which they were subsequently dislodged after a battle.

The department's statement, understood to have been prompted by Havana rumors, said:

"The department has been informed that an effort is being made to involve the embassy at Havana in the action taken by the Cuban army officers last month in taking refuge in the National Hotel, and in subsequent events.

"The department can state unequivocally that, far from instigating the assembling of the officers in the National Hotel, Ambassador Welles had no knowledge of their intention until the event took place."

U. S. Rail Order On Cheap Basis Says McKaig

Steel Men Want $40 a Ton, as Reasonable Return, He Declares.

Pittsburgh, Oct. 15 (AP).—The Nation's leading steel operators perked up the other day when the Government announced it may buy more than $30,000,000 in rails, but at least one of them said tonight he is less enthusiastic now that he has studied the conditions under which the order would be placed.

He is C. V. McKaig, vice president and general manager of sales for the Carnegie Steel Co., U. S. Steel Corporation subsidiary.

McKaig quoted Joseph B. Eastman, Federal coordinator of transportation, as saying the order would be placed only if an "expected" reduction in the price of steel materializes.

"Such a reduction is the last thing the operators want," said McKaig. "I think the present 'pegged' price of $40 a ton is about right.

"One of the purposes of the NRA is to assure a reasonable return to the manufacturer."

Eastman said the order would put thousands of workers back in the mills.

McKaig said the steel manufacturers already have contributed an estimated $100,000,000 annually in increased salaries.

The announcement of the proposed plan accompanied a request for bids on 844,000 tons of rails. Such an order would be more than four times the total for the last year, when production barely exceeded 200,000 tons. The capacity is 3,500,000 tons annually.

"In contrast with all other products," McKaig added, "rails are sold on a gross ton basis, 2,240 pounds to a ton, as compared with 2,000 pounds for bars, shapes and plates. This means that a $40-a-ton price for rails is equivalent to $35.70 a net ton. Merchant bars of a similar grade command $45 a net ton."

Mrs. William Chewning, jr., the former Miss Margo Couzens, will be one of the judges at the show, to be held Saturday at the Rock Spring farm on the Rockville-Norbeck pike.

A musical chair class has been added to the program. Mrs. J. Banks Berry, secretary of the hunt, expects many officers from Fort Myer to attend.

Variety Store Sales Showing Continued Gain

September Had Increase Over August and Year Ago.

(Associated Press.)

New Commerce Department figures on retail trade yesterday showed the Nation spent more dollars in 5, 10 to a dollar stores in September than in August, and more than in September last year.

The gains were about 7.5 per cent in September over August, and about 5 per cent in September this year over September last year.

These statistics covered only variety stores. The gain over August this year was smaller than in any of the previous three years, but this was partially accounted for by August's unseasonal gain of 3.4 per cent over July.

But for the first time in this same period, September showed an increase over September of the previous year. September, 1932, for example, was 11.4 under September, 1931; 1931 was 4.7 per cent under 1930, and 1930 was 8.4 per cent under 1929.

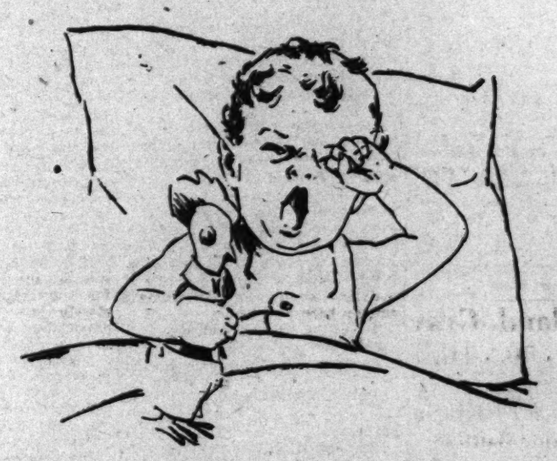

Government economists said increases were usual at this time of year, but added they were particularly important at this time because of the unseasonal increases in production during the summer.

Officials Speed Plans to House And Feed Poor

(Associated Press.)

To speed development of Roosevelt plans for housing and feeding the Nation's unfortunates, administration aids are proceeding as rapidly as possible toward creation of the contemplated Federal Housing Corporation.

In another phase of similar work the Public Works Administration, which will supply the finances, has assigned experts to draw plans for the home-constructing agency and correlating its activities with the projected subsistence farm program.

Incorporation papers have been prepared for the housing unit, which will be under the general direction of Secretary Ickes, Public Works Administrator.

Outline Ready Soon.

Administration officials indicated yesterday that the rough outlines of what would be done and how would be ready soon.

In general, they said, the plan would be construction of individual homes and apartment buildings, none to be ostentatious, but "clean and decent places," to take the place of existing slum dwellings.

No one would estimate how much might be spent. Officials pointed to expenditures of around $40,000,000 for slum clearance already authorized.

For Rent or Sale.

Buildings will be rented and sold on the partial-payment plan, official said.

It was indicated the apartments would be "walk-ups," with individual or row-houses along the same pattern.

Coincident to the housing plan, officials are studying a correlation with subsistence farming, in the belief that it might be desired in some instances to move families to farms from areas being cleared for homes.

$25,000,000 for Farms.

The Public Works Administration was given $25,000,000 for the subsistence farming program, under which families are to be placed on small tracts of land to grow their own foodstuffs and become economically independent through allied educational and industrial development.

Approximately $8,000,000 is to be used in building 23 villages of such families, with about 200 families in each, in mining areas in Pennsylvania, West Virginia and western Kentucky.

The first of these was ordered near Morgantown, W. Va. Each family will have from 2 to 4 acres and a small house, to cost about $2,000. It will become their property under a 20-year purchase plan.

Woman Party Will Combat Job Ousters

Convention Called to Act On Issue; Government Stand Under Fire.

An "emergency" convention, summoned by the National Woman's Party to take action in what officers describe as the present crisis in the economic position of women, will meet November 4 and 5 in Wilmington, Del., home of the chairman, Mrs. Florence Bayard Hilles. Gov. C. Douglas Buck will welcome the delegates.

Women were urged in the convention summons to use their political power to protect their economic liberty. The call, signed by Mrs. Hilles, said:

"Since the depression overtook us, attacks on women's right to work have been made through nearly every legislative assembly in the United States. Especially have married women teachers and married women in Government employ been attacked.

Under the national industrial recovery act trade codes are being drawn up that discriminate against women. We are opposed to the attempt to thrust married women back to a position of economic dependence."

One session will be devoted to a discussion of alleged discriminations against women Government workers and women in industry.

Plans to meet the situation so far as this country is concerned will be acted upon and a national campaign outlined at the final business session, at which Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, of Washington, will preside.

Cross-Section View of Colony Provided. in Safety.

Most people go to school for nature studies, but not the family of James W. Brown, vice president of the Greater Washington Sod Association. The Browns live at Farview, near Brookeville, Md.

The Brown family has a hornets' nest on the living room window, with cross-section views so they can watch in safety the pursuits of the colony.

The nest was started last spring. The Browns did not disturb the nest and gradually it was enlarged until now it is 2 feet wide.

The nest was built against the window pane and the inside galleries are discernible through the glass. Members of the family and visitors from Washington have been watching with interest the growth of the colony.

Patsy Wynne, 4, granddaughter of the Browns, has been interested. Like many delvers into things strange, she suffered in the quest for knowledge. Patsy peered too closely into the nest, whereupon one of the hornets reminded her to keep her distance.

The hornets have one class which cares for the young and another which fares forth to secure food. The comings and goings through the many galleries of the nest are interesting.

The Browns consider the nest just another attraction for their 204-year-old home and decided not to disturb the nest in the hope the colony will revive next spring.

Plants Oppose Furniture Code In Hagerstown

One-Shift Clause Called Doom of Factories in Small Towns.

Hagerstown, Md., Oct. 15 (Spl.). Directors of the Hagerstown Chamber of Commerce will meet tomorrow to consider the request of two local furniture factories for the chamber to join them in protest against the proposed furniture code.

Protests already have been filed in Washington by the Brandt Cabinet Works and the Statton Furniture Co., employing approximately 300 men, against section 2 of the proposed code, which provides for one shift of workers daily and no more.

Both companies say this section might force the closing of furniture plants in small towns.

The one-shift clause also will force them to lay off men in several departments because it would be impossible to get sufficient production through the machine department to keep employes busy in other departments, it is said.

In small plants, such as exist in Hagerstown, the line of furniture manufactured is seasonable, the bulk of sales coming in the last five months of the year.

Full Surrender Of Life Needed, Says Dr. Niles

No Easier Now Than 1900 Years Ago to Serve Christ, He Warns.

"All the years that have passed since the days of Christ have made it no easier to become a Christian," warned the Rev. Frank S. Niles yesterday morning at the Georgetown Presbyterian Church.

Mr. Niles told how an "unsatisfactory answer" by Jesus had turned away from the Cause of the Kingdom an intelligent and honest young man of the type the church would have welcomed, adding:

"It was a rich ruler of prestige and power, a moral man interested in spiritual matters. Jesus told him he must measure up his life with God's plan; that God should be master of life and money the servant.

"Jesus said nothing about giving one-tenth of our income. He demanded that all we have, all we are, be consecrated to God in the service of others. Because the rich young ruler was intelligent enough to understand this teaching, and honest enough to see he could not live up to it, he 'went away sorrowful, for he had great possessions.'

"What Jesus demanded of him, He demands of all. Our problem may be money or lust, appetites, family—whatever it is, God must be supreme.

"This may mean a great exodus from the church, but those who remain true will make the church invincible."

Motorist Hits Dog, Admits It, Is Dead

Owner Nurses Revenge for Several Days.

Nevada, Mo., Oct. 15 (AP).—John "Casey" Jones' dog suffered a fractured leg when it was struck by a car.

Jones found Arthur Knapp, 23, in his parked machine today, police said, and asked him if he had run over the animal.

"I ran over somebody's dog," officers said Knapp replied.

Knapp was shot and killed. Jones was arrested.

"Slicker" Bosses Grid Fans, Then Takes Gate Cash

San Francisco, Oct. 15 (AP).—A large man with a large and official-looking badge made himself very useful directing crowds entering Kezar Stadium to witness the University of San Francisco-Oregon State College football game.

He made a big impression on Lesley Whistler and Robert Albers, U. S. F. students in charge of one of the box offices. So, when he approached them after the crowds had diminished and said, "well, boys, I'll take the big money over to the main office," they handed him $270.

Police are hunting for the official-looking man and the "main office" to which he took the money.

Al Williams' Plane With NRA Flags for Byrd Downed Here

Ace Kept From Norfolk Rites by Bad Motor; Will Try Today.

Two NRA emblems, scheduled to sail with the Byrd South Pole expedition, failed to arrive in Norfolk for planned ceremonies yesterday, when Al Williams, former Naval ace, was forced to land at the Naval Air Station by a sticking valve on his Curtis-Hawk monoplane.

The emblems, gifts of NRA Administrator Hugh S. Johnson, were picked up by Williams at Hoover Field, and he took off toward Norfolk. Members of the Byrd expedition were waiting to receive the flags aboard the Antarctic ship.

Williams had been in the air less than a half hour when he noticed something was amiss with his engine, and turned back to Washington. He was forced to land at the Naval field. A few adjustments were made and he again took off.

Still not satisfied with the plane's functioning, Williams nosed into Hoover Field. Mechanics spent nearly 15 minutes working over the engine. Williams decided to call off the flight and motored into the city to spend the night with friends.

Another attempt to reach Norfolk will be made today. One of the NRA emblems will be flown from the Byrd flagship. The other will be left at the South Pole.

John R. Oliver Declares Love Greatest Law

Author-Minister Speaks at Morning Hour at St. Thomas'.

Love of God and neighbor is God's greatest law, said the Rev. John Rathbone Oliver, M. D., author, physician, psychiatrist, and minister, who gave the morning sermon at St. Thomas' Church yesterday.

To love God genuinely, said Dr. Oliver, we must answer the world's most all-important question in the way of the Catholic Church, "What Think Ye of Christ?"

"Whose son is he? This is the question we must answer," the internationally known author explained. "To it there are three answers generally given.

"Some conceive of Jesus as a great man whose influence lives after him like that of Sophocles or Shakespeare. Others believe him to have a Divine being, remaining in the hearts of believers, a great human example.

"But the Catholic Church for hundreds of years has called him a 'God of God, begotten not born, God in man;' a dynamic power at the helm of the world.

"God without Christ as a part of Him is hard to love. He is too distant from man. The second answer is difficult to imagine. But by believing the church's answer, we must love God and obey his greatest law."

Bay Yields Body Of Slain Woman, 65

San Diego Man Who Lived in Same House Sought.

San Diego, Calif., Oct. 15 (AP).—The mutilated body of a woman identified by police as Mrs. Laura Straw, 65, of San Diego, was found floating in bags in the bay here today.

A young man who lived in the same house was sought for questioning. His name was not revealed.

Police said they found a hammer with which the woman's skull was crushed and a carpenter's saw used to cut off her legs. A blood-soaked mattress also was discovered in the house.

Loans Versus Fiat Money.

Why should a government borrow in order to finance emergency expenditures when it might for a trifling outlay manufacture paper money and tender it in payment of services rendered? When a government borrows, it not only undertakes to return the principal at maturity but it has to pay interest on the advance. No similar obligations are assumed when fiat money is put into circulation to meet current outlays. Consequently, many people conclude that the last-named method of financing a deficit is a cheap and easy way in which to obtain something for nothing. If this popular argument in favor of manufacturing paper money to meet government outlays not covered by taxes or other receipts is sound, it is difficult to understand why a government should ever incur the trouble and expense of borrowing from private sources to finance public expenditures.

It is not surprising that untrained persons should be misled by the sophistical or ignorant arguments of fiat money advocates, especially in face of the conflicting opinions and obscure theories advanced by some supposed monetary experts. There is little reason to doubt that the majority of people opposed to inflation believe that when the government finds it necessary to raise funds other than by taxation it is a much safer and sounder policy to borrow to balance the budget than to resort to paper money issues representing its unsecured promises to pay. The favorable public reaction to the announcement of the new conversion bond issue, for example, affords clear proof of a widespread belief in the superiority of a program of deficit financiering based upon loans instead of paper money issues.

If pressed to say why credit expansion (or credit inflation, as it is sometimes called) produced by government borrowing is less dangerous than monetary inflation resulting from fiat issues, the average man has no rational answer to give. Furthermore, he gets little assistance from reading the learned essays of theorists who in some cases maintain that it makes no difference whether a government with a budgetary deficit to cover increases the volume of purchasing power in use by credit operations or by printing fiat money.

As a matter of fact, the economic effects of these alternative methods of covering deficits differ in various respects, but the major distinction of compelling practical importance lies in the necessity of holding the confidence and enlisting the cooperation of private lenders when a government borrows to carry out a spending program. When a government decides to issue fiat money, on the other hand, its legislators are under increasing pressure to approve new kinds of expenditures for all sorts of purposes. When it is no longer necessary to consider the effect upon investment sentiment, the temptation to yield to the importunities of spenders by printing more money is almost irresistible.

The monetary history of the United States and other countries shows that when politicians and legislators are freed from customary spending restraint under a regime of fiat money, their discretionary powers of authorizing paper money issues are virtually certain to be abused. The government that borrows, however, must deal with private lenders who are seeking secure investment outlets for their savings. Consequently, an external nonpolitical check upon reckless spending is in evidence at all times. When the government makes an appeal for investment support by selling long-term bonds, this outside check upon fiscal extravagance becomes more effective than it is when reliance is placed mainly upon short-term issues bought largely on credit by banks. In both cases, government borrowing is constantly restrained by fear of alienating private investors, individual and institutional.

The government realizes this situation and so does the public. That is why the foes of fiat money have been cheered by the government's decision to ask for investment support at this time by offering a long-term bond issue.

Winter Conservation Camps.

Plans to continue the emergency conservation work during the winter months will offer opportunity for the enlistment of 126,000 new men for the enrollment period beginning this month. Openings for this large number of additional forest workers are due to discharge of an equal number who are returning home or entering private employment.

The same number of camps, 1,468, will be maintained this winter as during the summer months, and the corps will be recruited to the same maximum strength of 302,000. Director Fechner reports that the construction of winter quarters and the purchase of warm clothing for the men are well advanced. From two to eight buildings are being erected on each of the winter camp sites, this work being about one-third completed, utilizing the 300,000,000 feet of lumber and other building material purchased by the Quartermaster Corps of the War Department.

There will be a decided change in the regional distribution of the new forest camps to conform to climatic conditions, the center of Conservation Corps population shifting from the West to the East and South. In the Ninth Corps Area, in the Northwest, for example, 189 camps will be abandoned, and an equal number of new camps established in Central and Southern States. Of the 1,468 summer camps 550 will be moved to new sites. In Southern camps new wooden mess halls and utility buildings are being built, but in that milder climate the men will sleep in tents.

The District of Columbia is to have a conservation camp this winter. Maryland will have 12 and Virginia 69. In all of the 918 old camps where tents are now used new buildings are to be erected, including barracks.

The Strike Menace.

Use of strikes to settle disputes arising under the NRA program has become a major problem. In spite of urgent appeals to organized labor by NRA officials and extensive efforts toward mediation, strikes continue to paralyze a number of industries in several parts of the country. Industrial recovery is delayed, antagonism between capital and labor is fostered, and workmen lose substantial sums in wages.

The concern of the National Recovery Administration over this situation was manifested in the address of Gen. Johnson before the American Federation of Labor convention. In plain language he told the labor delegates that if "you permit or countenance this economic sabotage, * * * public confidence and opinion will turn against you and * * * result in your destruction, as you know better than I can tell you."

The attitude of the NRA also is reflected in the following sentence from Gen. Johnson's address:

> Labor needs to use no aggression in this process and you will get in these codes the maximum of what the particular economic situation permits and no amount of militant pressure can change that result.

In other words, Gen. Johnson says that labor does not need the strike under the NRA program and ought not to tolerate it. He believes that the NRA affords sufficient protection for the rights of workingmen through its codes and arbitration machinery.

An abundance of advice on this problem was given during the course of the convention. Several speakers appealed for adjustments by reason and intelligence rather than by force. One speaker inveighed against governmental interference with labor and declared that strikes would grow in number until some of the industrial codes are liberalized. This seems to have been a discordant note in the convention. President Green asserted that labor should maintain the right to strike, but he urged that all disputes be submitted to arbitration and that the strike be used only "as an instrument of last resort." The federation refused to go on record in support of striking groups. Apparently there is little sympathy, even in the ranks of labor, with the attempts of some factions to take advantage of the present situation by fomenting trouble.

Cooperative effort is essential to recovery. The present situation calls for the utmost tolerance and patience on the part of both labor and capital. Certainly, the public will not look with favor upon resort to strikes for the purpose of enforcing demands except in extreme cases where grave abuses exist and where every possible effort has been made to bring about amicable adjustments. If the recovery plan is to produce results, compromises on both sides must be forthcoming.

Unless reason and patience take precedence over intimidation and violence the entire series of adjustments designed to stimulate production and employment will be threatened. The interests of both labor and capital, as well as the public interest, call for a conciliatory attitude on the part of all concerned while the country is struggling toward economic equilibrium.

Federal Expenditures.

Expenditures of the Federal Government are rapidly approaching the record of last year. At the beginning of the current fiscal year expenditures were running considerably below the figures of the previous year. But the last daily statement of the Treasury shows that $1,084,757,776 has been spent since July 1, compared with $1,298,690,114 in the corresponding period of last year.

Expenditures thus far this month are keeping still more nearly even with those of a year ago. In other words, the comparison of current drafts upon the Treasury with expenditures in the fiscal year 1933 become increasingly unfavorable.

The deficit for the first three and a half months of this year is much smaller than it was twelve months ago. At that time expenditures exceeded revenue by $800,540,729. The current deficit is $244,800,896. Of course, this improvement largely represents increased receipts. Congress levied new taxes at its last session. To some extent these are responsible for an increase of miscellaneous internal revenue from $213,934,721 in the first three and a half months of last year to $486,280,749 for the corresponding period this year. Receipts from income taxes are lower than they were a year ago, but the miscellaneous levies are bringing in considerable sums.

A great deal of emphasis has been placed upon the Federal deficit in recent years. Some people have become accustomed to watching the deficit as a barometer of conditions in the Treasury. For a number of reasons it is not a good indicator of the Government's financial position. Especially at present a comparison of the deficit with that of last year may lead to erroneous conclusions.

Of the $3,300,000,000 which Congress appropriated for public works only $76,060,071 has been drawn from the Treasury. The Public Works Administration is making strenuous efforts to speed up its construction program. If it should succeed in getting $1,000,000,000 spent by next July 1, that entire amount would be added to the actual deficit.

Under the double budget system now in operation "emergency" expenditures are put in a class by themselves. With these drafts upon the Treasury eliminated, receipts for this fiscal year show a considerable surplus over the remaining "ordinary" expenditures. But even the "ordinary" outlay in recent months does not include all the expense items that are accumulating against current revenue.

The public works section of the so-called recovery act provides for a sinking fund equal to 2½ per cent of the amount expended each year from the $3,300,000,000 appropriation. Congress imposed taxes on corporate dividends and capital stock and increased the gasoline tax to provide revenue for that fund. Such revenue is now being collected, but the necessary credit in the sinking fund will not be set up until the end of the fiscal year. If $1,000,000,000 should be spent on public works this year it would be necessary to set aside $25,000,000 for the sinking fund. In other words, the Treasury is now accumulating as part of the surplus in its ordinary budget funds that later must be set aside to finance the new debt that is being created.

In view of the heavy demands that are expected from the various emergency administrations there appears to be little hope that Federal expenditures during the coming months will be reduced.

Retail Food Prices.

A bulletin just issued by the Bureau of Labor Statistics shows that the general upward trend of the 42 food items covered by the bureau's index was resumed during the two weeks ended September 26, following a slight drop early in the month.

During July and August food prices advanced sharply. The weighted index number of the bureau, which uses the average prices for the year 1913 as 100, was 107.4 for September 26, compared with 90.4 for April 15, which was the lowest level this year. Comparing the high point reached last month with September, 1932, having an index of 100.3, a rise of 7 per cent in the prices of food is indicated within the year. The index for the September period is the highest that has been registered during the past two years, being above the 1913 average by about 7½ per cent and higher than the April low by nearly 19 per cent.

The bureau's statistics are based upon reports from 51 cities. Compared with the figures of a year ago, the markets of every municipality show an increase in food prices. Washington shows a fairly average increase in the course of a year of 6 per cent. This covers the entire list of 42 commodities, of which 24 indicate increases. Some of these, naturally, have risen much more than is indicated by the general average.

Detroit leads all cities in the extent of its increase in food costs, which reach more than 16 per cent, while Cleveland, Columbus, Los Angeles and Louisville all report advances of more than 10 per cent. Among the cities with the lowest rate of increase in food prices, averaging 5 per cent or less, are Baltimore, Charleston, S. C., New York, and Portland, Me. At the bottom of the list, with only about 1 per cent increase, are Norfolk, Chicago and Portland, Oreg. The item showing the greatest increase for the year is potatoes, 86 per cent. Flour prices are now 58 per cent above those of a year ago.

Russia and Mother Goose.

From the Boston Transcript.

Somebody asks what is going to become of the literature of the nursery when all the world has gone democratic and kings and queens are as extinct as the hairy rhinoceros? Take all the throned monarchs and princes and princesses out of Mother Goose and Grimm and what is there left? Only a few jejune, dull leaves with hardly enough of magic and delight in them to capture a child's fancy during the hour before the coming of the Sandman. Cinderella, Puss in Boots and the Sleeping Beauty are creatures of a kindly world in which the puissant are forever stooping to lend a hand to the children of misfortune. In Mother Goose kings hobnob with commoners on the most genial footing. There is our old friend King Cole, puffing at his pipe in a wine-cellar with his cronies, like Frederick the Great; the Queen sitting in the kitchen eating bread and honey; and that prime gourmand among potentates whose chef dished him up a pie of four and twenty singing blackbirds. If you banish these from the children's playbooks you might as well take away Santa Claus and be done with it.

In America we perceive no harsh menace in these royal figures, no subtle monarchical propaganda in the rhymes and stories that paint kingship in so pleasant a light. But Russia, seeing in them something deep and dark and sinister, some time ago denounced them as inimical to the principles of the new regime, and it is to be presumed that for lack of these nursery jingles and tales Russian children were for a while sung to sleep with ballads about the beauty of the Five-Year Plan and limericks about concrete mixers and hydraulic pumps.

But now the Soviet authorities are out with an announcement that the "circulation of some of the classics of children's literature will be permitted," and we may look for early publication of a Russian Mother Goose and Grimm's Fairy Tales, carefully edited so that the Russian child will not get wrong ideas into its head. They may reprint untinkered such of the old tales as showed the kingly caste in a ludicrous or hateful light—the King of France who marched up a hill with 20,000 men and then marched down again, the futile efforts of all the king's horses and all the king's men to restore Humpty Dumpty to his place on the wall, the wicked Baron Bluebeard, the King of Clubs "who often drubs his loving queen and wife" and so on. And who knows but that one of these days the ban will be lifted from "A Visit of St. Nicholas" even though Russian children have to ask one another in what corner of the world such wonderful things can happen.

EDDIE CANTOR ON SLAVERY.

("The days of slavery are over," declared Eddie Cantor, prominent picture star, in denouncing the reported White House move to keep Hollywood salaries within reasonable bounds."—News Item.)

"Yes, sir," said Mr. Cantor, creaking in every limb from his income from pictures, radio, literature and theater, "the days of slavery in the United States are definitely over. Any attempt to restore them will find me in the front rank of those willing to fight for the principles of Abraham Lincoln."

* * * *

Mr. Cantor paused to take two more sacks of pay checks off the mail wagon and continued with feeling. "Was the Civil War fought for nothing? Did the red blood of millions of dollars . . . millions of soldiers run like crimson rivers for four terrible years for nothing?" (At the mention of something for nothing, Wallace Beery—$5,000 a week—and Greta Garbo—$40,000 a month—swooned with a queer gurgling noise.)

"Shall Sheridan's Ride become a mockery, Sherman's March to the Sea an idle jest and Grant's Campaign in the Wilderness a futile gesture?" demanded Mr. Cantor—$3,000 a week on the air, $200,000 a year in pictures.

"No," came the answer in, a mighty roar from the throats of Harold Lloyd—$500,000 per annum—Jackie Cooper—$5,000 a week—and a group of extras forced to do bits for $50 a day.

"Again I tell you that the era of slavery is dead and done for!" shouted Mr. Cantor, "A nation can not endure half slave and half free."

(This allusion to something free drove Baby Leroy—$3,500 a week—into a crying fit, which brought 7 nursemaids on the run at once.)

"Ten thousand times no," declared Eddie.

"How much is ten thousand times no in our money?" asked Jimmy Cagney—$7,500 a week—trying to figure something on his cuff. "And do I take out agent's commission?"

"The moving picture actors of America have been ground down, driven and whipped and enslaved long enough. Their days of privation and want and suffering are over. They have a right to live like other men. They have a right to eat and sleep. It is of paramount interest to America that . . ."

"If you're gonna mention Paramount, mention Metro and the others," spoke up Will Rogers, taking the gold bags off six pack mules.

Mr. Cantor braced himself for a mighty conclusion from Lincoln's Gettysburg speech.

"Four grand and seven," he began.

But he got no further. It was too petty a sum to hold the interest.

EMPTY METAPHORS.

My heart is like an empty house,
Neglected and forlorn,
Where hope is just a starving mouse,
That wonders why 'twas born.
My heart an empty house has been
So long, it's now too late
To welcome any new guest in
To share its void estate.
And do I miss the tender hands
To oil its creaking doors,
And sweep away the dust that stands
In piles about the floors?
Or do I long for childish feet
And doors that children slam?
And am I feeling incomplete?
The heck I am!

Daily Talks About Books and Authors

GEORGE MOORE AND OTHERS.

During the month of January, 1933, four men died, who were known everywhere in the world. Calvin Coolidge, Vladimir De Pachmann, George Moore, John Galsworthy.

When Coolidge was Lieutenant Governor of Massachusetts, I asked what he thought of a certain famous member of Congress. He replied, "Don't think much of him." I talked with the great pianist De Pachmann, after one of his concerts; he is the man Huneker called the Chopinzee. The critic Philip Hale said his playing of Chopin aroused feelings in women such as they had when, after the lapse of years, they looked at their bridal dress. The most diverting interview with this pianist is in the late Edward Bok's book, called "Twice Thirty."

Mr. Galsworthy I saw many times in both England and America. In September, 1928, I had several highly interesting talks in London with George Moore, in the house he made famous, 121 Ebury street. Although suffering from the illness from which he never recovered, he was most cordial and kind. He said the aim of his life had been to write novels that should free England from moralizing; novels ought to tell the truth about life without comment or bias, he said. He believed he had completely succeeded in his purpose. He thought the real test of an author's ability was shown by his revisions of his written work even more than by the first drafts. He read aloud to me one of his short stories not yet published. At the end, he smiled, and said, "Turgenev would have liked that." And I believe he would.

There is no book I am awaiting with more interest than the "Life of George Moore," now being written by the author of "The Fountain," Mr. Charles Morgan.

No Government Wins a War by Asking For Voluntary Contributions

By Robert Quillen

Mr. Arthur Brisbane demonstrated his influence during the boom. Day after day he cried: "Don't sell America short or you will be sorry." And the millions heard him gladly and bought and bought—and lost their shirts.

Now he is trying, in his sly way, to encourage opposition to the Government's "confiscation" of gold.

If today the Government can take a citizen's gold, says he, tomorrow it may take his bicycle, his Belgian hares and his underwear.

That seems quite plausible, as all partisan arguments do if part of the evidence is omitted, but it ignores the fact that extraordinary measures are justified by extraordinary conditions.

It may be granted that the Government has no constitutional right to demand a citizen's gold—or other property.

But a free man's body is his own property—the only natural property he has, and the most sacred. Yet in time of war the Government seizes this property without process of law and uses it for the good of the Nation.

Is it right to seize a citizen's body and wrong to seize his gold?

That would be the rich man's idea—and Mr. Brisbane is rich. He saw no violation of the Constitution when the Government said to millions of young men: "Give me yourself—your time and ability and liberty and life." But now he is alarmed when the Government says: "Give me your gold."

Well, let us admit that many of the Government's recovery plans could not stand in court. But what of it?

Do you prefer the Constitution and starvation or violation of the Constitution to bring back prosperity?

We choose a leader and ask him to save us and then forthwith do our utmost to interfere with his plans.

We are eager to be saved if the job can be done at the expense of somebody else, and without any help from us, but we refuse to obey orders.

Volunteers in every American war have resented discipline. They were willing to save the country if the job didn't require obedience.

Our chief fault is too much liberty.

Our chosen leaders are making war against a depression and trying to save us. We can cooperate like grown men, or keep our "liberty" and continue to suffer until we learn some sense.

Debts and the Dollar.

Topeka Capital.

From official government estimates the foreign debt of Germany, which includes the private debt, but not including direct foreign investments in Germany, has been reduced in the last 18 months by 21 per cent. About one-half of the debt is payable in the United States, the annual interest charge on which at this time is calculated at about $100,000,000.

It is pointed out by the National Industrial Conference Board that payable in United States dollars the interest as well as principal of the debt has shrunk 30 per cent by reason of the depreciation of the United States dollar. At latest figures the shrinkage is in fact some 33 per cent.

Machine Guns.

Lawrence Journal-World.

Small arms manufacturers are said to be sponsoring legislation to be proposed for passage at the next session of Congress, providing that the sale of machine guns shall be permitted only to law enforcement officers. The fact that former sheriffs and policemen some times become implicated in law violations would appear to indicate that even with such a law machine guns might still find their way into the hands of gangsters.

A better plan might be to provide that the Government shall be the sole owner of machine guns and that manufacture be limited to the number required to fill its orders. The Government might then license the use of machine guns to States, counties and cities, requiring periodical check-ups and inspections.

Along the Potomac

With

Carlisle Bargeron

ONE profession for which a NRA code will have to be prescribed before we can make any pretense of having attained the perfect state is that of the lawyer practicing before our Government departments as gentlemen of influence, gentlemen who are "close" to the administration and to men of affairs.

Bargeron.

It is not a question here of prescribing minimum and maximum fees, of adding 10 per cent to the invoice price. This is not the problem at all. There is a rather general appreciation of the necessity of letting prices alone in this pursuit because it is one of our very best ways of redistributing wealth. Not only that, but the gentlemen are residents of our city, and since the Government employes have already taken the rap it is realized that to tamper with their fees would be an unfair imposition on our local merchants, rubbing it in, so to speak.

And, too, the administration wants to get the good-will of local merchants just at this time, not their ill-will, because it is trying to get them to agree to a uniformity of explanations for the mark-up in prices of their goods, and not have some of them saying it is due to the NRA, while others blame it on the cotton processing tax. No leaders of men, and certainly not of merchants, rub their followers the wrong way when they are trying to get them to do something.

* * * *

THE need for a code for the lawyers practicing before the departments then is not because of any trouble about fees. It is rather for fair practices in the profession. The code would differ from other codes in this respect. It would attempt only to prescribe fair practices, to eliminate cutthroat competition, which, whether it constitutes a waste of our natural resources or not, certainly causes unhappiness in the lawyers' ranks.

The idea would be to prevent one lawyer from having more influence with the departments than another, of preventing his getting such a start on his fellows as is now the case in many instances. They would all be placed on the same degree of "closeness to the President," or to the department with which they deal.

The practice of letting one of them come in and reorganize the department to the disadvantage of the others would be prohibited. All reorganizations would have to be by the man appointed as the departmental head or by a commission of all the lawyers practicing before it.

* * * *

THE ragged, unfair and uneconomic situation now obtaining among the lawyers is brought clearly to the fore by the case of Joe Callan. Mr. Callan is an income tax lawyer, who practices before the Internal Revenue Department.

For sometime, though, he has had an office in the department and is said to be engaged in reorganizing it for the commissioner, Guy T. Helvering, whose appointment was something even the stanch Democrats had difficulty in swallowing. So prominent has Mr. Callan been around the department, such freedom does he have in the run of the files, that there has been a rumor that he was being groomed to succeed Mr. Helvering. Nothing like this seems to be in the offing, however, so it is likely Mr. Callan is doing no more than assisting in a reorganization.

* * * *

WELL, anyone can appreciate what a start this gives Mr. Callan over other lawyers. Why, it may be that after Mr. Callan has effected his reorganization his competitor lawyers will have to get a card from him before they can even get into the reorganized office.

Mr. Callan undoubtedly knows his Internal Revenue Department. He served there under Dan Roper.

He is understood now to be the Du Ponts' lawyer before the department, though, I may be mistaken about this. Anyway, this is given as an argument in his behalf. By just being a specialist, so to speak, and not a general tax practitioner, he does not come into competition with the other lawyers.

The administration, however, has ruled on this specialist business. The captive mine operators contended they were not subject to the same union regulations that were applied to commercial operators because they sold coal only to the steel companies which owned them.

The administration held that the same code should apply. It would seem then that as a matter of fair practice, Mr. Callan should be made to stand back to the line with the others.

When She Is Ill.

It's difficult with her away!
So many things she wants to know.
"What dress did Janet wear today?"
Each morning when to her I go
To sit awhile beside her bed,
Where she is prisoner to pain,
Before she can be comforted
So many things I must explain.

This being dad and mother, too,
Is rather difficult, I'd say.
I've learned how much there is to do
About the house from day to day.
And this the burden of my song:
The home is lonely, dull and drear
And all the days and nights are long
Because the mother isn't here.

High Tax Asked In Rockefeller Liquor Report

Should Not Be Shifted to Consumer by Others, Says Review.

New York, Oct. 15 (AP). — The Rockefeller liquor survey said today that "proper" taxes on alcoholic beverages should yield about $700,000,000 yearly.

"This estimate," the survey said, "does not include the normal State, local and Federal taxes which the liquor trade will also bear."

The survey said it is convinced "a considerable part of the total taxes to be levied on the manufacture and sale of alcoholic beverages should be fastened upon the manufacturer and upon the retailer in such form that it can not be shifted readily to the consumer."

It suggested a tax rate on alcoholic beverages should bear a "reasonable relation to each other."

More Tax on Liquor.

"For example," it said, "standard whisky contains 12½ times as much alcohol as the present beer. On the basis of alcoholic content, the tax would vary 12.5 to 1."

Variations in value also should be considered, the survey said; hence: "Standard whisky of ordinary grade costs to manufacture from 40 to 60 cents per gallon, as compared with beer at 17 to 20 cents. The ratio here is about 3 to 1."

Variations in the "social desirability of consumption" should be considered, too, the survey said, continuing:

Restriction Opposed.

"From our point of view, there is no reason for an artificial restriction on light beer and light wines through the medium of price control.

"For spirits we think a handicap of three times the cost of manufacture is the safest point at which to begin."

Too Stubborn To Marry, They Say of Wales

Heir to Throne Guffaws When Told He's Becoming Just a Commoner.

The old enigma as to why the Prince of Wales doesn't get married has just been answered by the veteran war correspondent, T. R. Ybarra, who went all the way to England to find out the facts. Here's his answer, published in Collier's:

"Nothing illustrates the prince's independence of mind and his stubbornness in the face of century-old prejudice as his refusal to get married. The spectacle of the heir to the world's proudest throne unmarried in his fortieth year is wellnigh unprecedented. Yet he continues obdurate against incessant pressure.

"The fact of the matter is that he has made up his mind to marry only as his fancy dictates. Yet, at the same time, he is not quite so radically inclined as to marry a commoner. Such a step would be too great a blow not only for his royal relatives but for the monarchically minded British. So he prefers remaining single to tying himself to some princess for reasons of state and nothing else.

"And hereby hangs a tale.

"The prince's sister, Princess Mary, was married some years ago to Viscount Lascelles, a man without royal blood in his veins. The viscount takes his position very seriously—to the amusement of the Prince of Wales. Not long ago, when the prince had been going about in an especially care-free manner, associating with all sorts of persons and making speeches of an alarmingly socialistic trend, an aged and very conservative peer was deputed by the royal family to remonstrate with him.

"So the old peer tackled the prince. The prince warmly defended his conduct. The discussion grew violent. Finally the nobleman, angered, told him straight from the shoulder: 'Your royal highness, you are growing every day commoner and commoner!'

"The prince, instead of flying into a rage, burst out laughing, and, when he recovered himself, said to the old peer: 'Well, if I am growing commoner and commoner, remember that Lascelles is growing every day royaler and royaler.'"

Childish Love For Dramatics Lives Lifetime

Happy childhood days spent in playing "show" in an attic with nine brothers and sisters gave Mrs. William Channing Johnson the idea of forming drama classes for children.

Her aim is not so much to give training for the professional stage, but to teach youngsters poise, correct pronunciation and voice control, command of graceful gestures and the ability to do public speaking.

"We have been told countless times that every woman, at some time in her life, has longed to be an actress," Mrs. Johnson said, at her studio in the Gunston Hall School, 1906 Florida avenue northwest. "If that saying is true, then I must be in a class by myself, because I can truthfully say that I never had a desire to go on the stage.

"But I never have forgotten those jolly, carefree afternoons spent in the attic of our home in Staunton, Va., when we children dressed up in all sorts of fanciful costumes and 'emoted' to our heart's content. It is my desire to teach other youngsters something of the technique of the theater so that their shows will be worth the pennies charged their audiences of parents and indulgent friends. I'm afraid the audiences who attended my brothers' and sisters' performances didn't always get their money's worth."

Others Take Varied Fields.

Of those 10 children who played in the attic, Mrs. Johnson is the only one who has kept alive that interest in the theater.

The five boys chose the medical profession and, after receiving their degrees, entered various branches of the military service. It was quite natural they should turn to medicine rather than the theater. Their father was Dr. Archibald MacGill Fauntleroy, of Staunton, who performed the first hip-joint operation in the United States.

Four of the five girls became interested in homes of their own. The fifth one went to New York and studied at the American Academy of Dramatic Arts. She is Mrs. Johnson. This was after graduation from Mary Baldwin and special work at Newcomb. She became a member of the faculty at Hood College and established the first drama class of that school.

Summer vacations were spent in New Lork, studying with William DeMille, Mme. Alberti, Ben Greet and other authorities on the theater.

Teaches Others.

In the interim between her years at Hood College and her coming to Gunston Hall this autumn, Mrs. Johnson was active in chautauqua work. She taught drama to beginners in the chautauqua field and on various occasions gave programs.

"One of the most interesting experiences I ever had," she said, in telling of these programs, "was the time I had a tribe of Ojibway Indians for an audience."

Emily Bishop, the Chicago opera singer, and I had devised an Indian entertainment in which she sang tribal ballads and I read Miriah Ellis Ryan's "Love Letters of an Indian Boy." We gave the program at Little Traverse Bay, Mich., and invited the Ojibways to attend. They were extremely responsive and, at the close of the evening, sang a farewell song to us in their language.

Duncan Phyfe Reproductions "Like Genuine"

G Street Store Also Features Chippendale; Ever See a Niblick Swizzler?

By Ruth Ann Davis.

Genuine Duncan Phyfe and Chippendale pieces, with mighty few exceptions, were snapped up long ago by museums and people who dote on talking about their Pilgrim ancestors. But if you have an overwhelming desire to possess furniture with the purity of line and dignified grace of the originals, you may find authentic reproductions in a G street furniture shop.

The Duncan Phyfe piece, a solid mahogany Virginia sofa with exquisite carving, has brass toes and rich damask upholstery which may be had in several colors. Damask, in a fairly wide range of colors, also covers the seat of the mahogany Chippendale chair.

The sports note is sounded in an alluring new key with niblick-shaped swizzlers. Take your stance in front of a tall, frosty glass; drive off carefully with your niblick swizzler and in no time at all you'll be out of the rough, onto the fairway, with full speed ahead for the jolly old nineteenth hole. These amusing little gadgets for stirring drinks come in sets of four at a downtown department store. The price is 50 cents.

Elegance is expressed in every glittering facet of cut crystal perfume and powder sets, elaborately decorated with gold filigree and carved semiprecious stones. Incongruous, perhaps, but while thy're as French as a marquise with powdered hair, there's also an Oriental touch in the design of the sparkling stones. A black set, with rose, is quite sophisticated. Rose, amethyst and amethyst-with-rose sets probably will have more appeal for those who prefer delicacy to dash. The perfume bottle or powder dish may be purchased separately.

It is a perfectly simple, delightful matter to "brighten the corner where you are" if you have one of the new, modernistic table lamps, called "constellation" because of the twinkling stars cut in their shade. The shade, hemisphere-shaped, may be tilted by means of a black spike on top. Chromium and black form a scintillating combination. Copper "constellations" are grand for those rooms that haven't gone modernistic in a big way.

A novel variation of the door-top is a door wedge which slips neatly under the door and holds it firmly in place. You're not likely to stub your toe on it when you're slipping in, oh! so quietly, after the ball is over. And it adds a smart decorative touch when its base is surmounted with a wicked-looking black cat, tail straight in the air.

Simply "scrumptious" for cooking a snack over the campfire is an English breakfast skillet, square-shaped and divided into three compartments. Eggs may be fried "square" in the two small ones, thus doing away with those annoying fringes, so characteristic of egg sandwiches. The larger compartment is just right for full length strips of bacon. It will hold, however, a small steak or chop quite cozily.

Are you one of those temperamental persons who vibrate to colors? If you are and want to get color vibrations in a sweetly practical way, trot downtown to one of the large department stores and treat yourself to a box of pastel handi-puffs. That word "handi" perfectly describes them. They're slick for applying powder, rouge, or lotion, or for removing face cream. Fifty of them, wrapped in cellophane, are in a long narrow box. Fifty cents is the price.

A plump yellow baby chick is perched on top an ingenious double boiler to cheep at you saucily when your eggs are boiled to just the right minute. No longer need you watch the clock with one eye while the other is glued to the toaster. The lower compartment of the solid copper double boiler is for the eggs and water. Water must also be put in the top part, so much for soft-boiled eggs, so much for medium, and so much for hard-boiled ones. There's no danger of you making a mistake because lines are marked on the kettle, showing exactly how much water is required.

There's something irresistibly romantic about large, comfy chairs drawn close to an open fire. The romantic atmosphere is enhanced when sturdy cricket footstools are placed in front of the chairs, inviting fire gazers to be at perfect ease. Crickets with woven rush tops in an unpretentious, candid sort of design, and funny, squat, antique mahogany legs, are exceedingly attractive. Those who have a penchant for sitting on the floor will find these stools a happy substitute. The price is $6.

What's in Fashion?

Simple Lines, Plain Stitches Smartest Choice for Sweaters

Directed by Amos Parrish

Information as to where fashions of the type illustrated, and their variations, are available in Washington, will be given by the Fashion Department of The Washington Post, on request.

Have you noticed the change that's come over sweaters? Almost as though they had come home from a masquerade and removed their costumes to show their real faces. In other words, newest sweaters look like sweaters. There's little attempt to disguise them with frills, puffs and gadgets.

It's the simple sweater that's the smart one. Trim-fitting, lightweight zephyrs to wear with everyday skirts and suits. Heavier, looser ones to match to sports clothes.

Stockinette Stitch.

Allover ribbings are used, too, usually the size of the "knit two, purl two" rib, but occasionally the finer "knit one, purl one."

They aren't, however, entirely minus decoration, though it is almost never tricky. You'll find yoke effects knit in, in the same color but with a variation of stitch. Or a band of ribbing or garter stitch at the shoulders.

One of the newest favorites is a sweater classic . . . the plain slip-on with long sleeves knit in one with the body, making a looser armhole. Or the same idea with raglan sleeves as sketched at the left.

Turtle necks are in again. And simple cardigans. The sweater "twins," short-sleeved, slip-on and long-sleeved cardigan, are going right through the season. But the newer idea in sets is "triplets" . . . a cardigan with one matching and one contrasting slip-on.

New Yarns.

Flecked yarns or heather mixtures are a new idea. There are many color combinations in these but those with a dark brown basis are among the most popular. The flecks in these browns are usually beige, while in heather mixtures red, green and yellow are often combined with the brown.

Those twins at the right are easy to make for yourself, done in the simple stockinette stitch mentioned before.

Chevy Chase Women's Club To Celebrate

Organization Founded 20 Years Ago; Federation Head to Attend.

Because 20 Chevy Chase housewives formed an organization in 1913 "to promote the welfare of the community and of the State of Maryland," the Woman's Club of Chevy Chase, now numbering 550 members, will celebrate its twentieth anniversary Wednesday with a special program in the Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church.

Mrs. Joseph A. Burkart, upon whose front porch the club was started, will tell the story of the founding. Mrs. Thomas E. Robertson, president from 1920 to 1922, will relate the development of the club in later years.

Federation Head to Attend.

Official guests at the meeting will be Mrs. R. S. Allen, president of the Maryland Federation of Women's Club, and Mrs. B. Payton Whalen, president of the Montgomery County Federation and director for the Maryland Federation to the General Federation.

Edw. W. Broome superintendent of education in Montgomery County, and Dr. Jacob W. Biard, president of the Montgomery County Social Service League, will bring greetings on behalf of county schools and welfare groups, both of which the club has aided ever since its organization. The Rev. Henry Teller Cocke, rector of All Saints' Episcopal Church, who is the senior pastor in Chevy Chase, in respect to residence, will speak to the club in behalf of the community. Dr. J. Hillman Hollister, paster of the Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church, will give the invocation.

Numbered among the members of the club are women from all over the United States and from many foreign countries and the wives of prominent Government officials and heads of educational institutions.

During the two decades of its existence, it has stressed cultural, educational, and philanthropic interests. The present sections of work in the club are civics, which include committees on resolutions and legislation; applied education, public welfare, motion pictures, litreature, international relations, art, French, music, social, nature and drama. One purpose of these sections is to provide contacts impossible in the larger organization.

Scholarships Provided.

Contributions toward education reached the total of $500 during the last year. Although recently the educational fund has been used for scholarship work, it was employed in earlier days for the improvement of the elementary schools of Chevy Chase and other parts of the county through the gift of books and added facilities when needed.

Philanthropic disbursements have included $672 for the Social Service League of Montgomery County alone during the last year. Ninety-five dollars was given to the Montgomery County Hospital and almost $200 was contributed to District of Columbia institutions.

Charter members who still belong to the club are Mrs. A. Bruce Bielaski, Miss Annie M. Wilson, Mrs. Joseph A. Burkart, Mrs. William Golden Carter, Mrs. Bowen Crandall, Mrs. William H. Groverman, and Mrs. William M. Imlay.

Presidents of the club have been Mrs. George F. Mikkelson, who died this summer; Mrs. A. Bruce Bielaski, Mrs. H. S. Paine, Mrs. Thomas E. Robertson, Mrs. Eugene E. Stevens, Mrs. O. C. Merrill, Mrs. Alexander McC. Ashley, Mrs. William C. Dennis, Mrs. R. Harvey Sargent, Mrs. Karl Penning and Mrs. Frank M. Hoadley, who was elected last spring.

The Family Marketer

Inexpensive Budget Dinner Is Nourishing, Tasty and Seasonable.

Rush and excitement marks the daily arrival in Washington markets of truckloads of broccoli, carrots, turnips, parsnips, cabbages and other vegetables!

They come from hundreds of miles away, principally from Pennsylvania and the region surrounding Bristol.

As the thrifty housewife makes judicious selection, with the courteous assistance of the quiet-voiced retailer, seldom if ever does she pause to reflect upon the tremendous amount of effort expended in bringing these foodstuffs to her hand.

800 Work on Farm.

One retailer tells us that on a 600-acre farm outside Bristol, Pa., alone, 800 men are regularly employed in the Herculean task of furnishing truck-garden vegetables to markets as far Sauth as Washington; as far West as Scranton and Pittsburgh, and as far North as Boston.

When we consider the work involved in the production of these green foodstuffs; the tilling of the soil, the tending of the vegetables, their harvesting and their trucking, one marvels at the modest prices they command.

On today's round of the markets, we didn't have time to probe into the whence-come and how of the fruit family, though we found it, generously represented, at what appeared to be moderate prices. One exception to the rule, however, was the fresh pineapple, selling at 50 cents apiece, of quality only fair. And to indulge in strawberries—now just a little out of season—one should have to be mildly extravagant today.

There is a bargain in baskets of over-ripe plums, which promises to hold over for half the week. And when we say, "bargain," we don't mean for eating. We're thinking of the rich and palatable wine that should result from proper treatment of this luscious fruit.

Cauliflower High.

Cauliflower was queening it in the vegetable stalls, at a price to give it easy leadership over its humbler competitors.

Red cabbage is selling at 7½ cents a head, while its distant cousin, the Brussels sprout, was on sale at 25 cents the box. Very sturdy and appetizing it looked, too, arranged in crisp, clean rows.

Florida grapefruit is better and cheaper, selling for 5 cents to 10 cents each. Oranges are giving them a run for the money, being good in quality and low in price. Niagara grapes are only 25 cents the basket today and cranberries at 12½ cents a pound brightened their corner in more ways than one!

Basket upon basket of blushing crabapples, fresh and firm at $2.25 the bushel, brought visions to mind of a jar-lined jelly closet. Certainly nothing tastes better on toast, of a winter morning, than crabapple jelly, generously piled and sparkling and light.

Mushrooms Fat and Tender.

Asparagus is still coming in. Mushrooms are fat and tender, and crying in still voices to be served with a steak. At 75 cents a basket, they could scarcely be considered prohibitively priced. Parsnips can be had for 5 cents the pound.

Small yellow cymlins, at 10 cents a pound, brought to mind this recipe for serving them:

Cut the cymlin in slices, removing the tough parts. Place the slices in a frying pan, after sprinkling them generously with salt. Let stand for about an hour, or until the salt has drawn out the natural moisture. Add butter and seasoning and cook them slowly until they are soft and slightly browned. The smaller and younger the cymelins, the more delectable they are prepared in this way.

Piles of dainty young onions, at two bunches for 5 cents, caused saliva to rise in this onion-lover's mouth.

Oddly enough, string beans continue to be a scarce article on the market and 'tis a thing for regret. They're so good, and so good for us.

To One Who Requested a Personal Poem.

By Katherine W. Smith.

You are lucky—you don't know it—
Since you lack the chance to be
Target for my rhyming missles,
Subject for my poesy.
Opportunity? What of it?
As it is you will remain
Free of all my stinging arrows—
Lack the chance . . . escape the pain.

Natural Flavor Of Good Meat Is Best Sauce

Taste May Be Enhanced, However, in Various Ways; Recipes Given.

By Ruth Chambers.

The natural flavor of well-prepared meat is its own best "sauce." However, even this may be enhanced sometimes, and variety may be gained by use of an accompanying sauce. This is desirable especially in the case of the meat loaf made from left-over meats.

In any case, the sauce is to be used to enhance the real flavor of the meat rather than to change it. For this reason, certain sauces seem to be especially suited to certain kinds of meats.

The housewife who has experimented a bit with various meat sauces and tried out the taste of her family, as well as her own skill, has at her command a sure way of "dressing up" her meals now and then and encouraging appetites which may grow finicky.

Meat Loaf Sauce.

Here is a tasty sauce for meat loaf: Cut one clove of garlic and one onion very fine and cook until tender but not brown, in 2 tablespoons of bacon fat. Add one can of tomato sauce, 2 cups of meat stock, 1 pimento chopped fine and salt, pepper and paprika to taste. Cook until it is thick and turn over the meat loaf.

Maitre d'Hotel Butter.

Cream four tablespoons of butter, add one tablespoon of finely minced parsley, one tablespoon of lemon juice, ½ teaspoon salt and ¼ teaspoon onion juice. Chill and form into small balls. Serve with broiled lamb chops or steak.

Horseradish butter also goes well with broiled steaks or chops.

Horseradish Butter.

Horseradish Sauce.

Horseradish sauce which goes well with beef that is cooked in water is made up of 1 teaspoon of mustard, 1 tablespoon vinegar, 3 tablespoons cream, 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper and 1-3 cup of grated horseradish. Mix the ingredients in the order given and beat thoroughly.

Raisin Sauce.

For baked ham, raisin sauce is very good.

Blend 2 tablespoons of flour with 2 tablespoons of melted butter. Add 2 cups of cider and cook until the sauce thickens. Add ½ cup of seedless raisins, salt sparingly, and it is ready to serve.

Loganberry Sauce.

Take ½ cup loganberry juice, 1 cup powdered sugar, 2 teaspoons of grated lemon rind, 2 tablespoons grated horseradish and 3 tablespoons of lemon juice. Mix the ingredients together and bring to the boiling point. This sauce may be served hot or cold.

Pimento Sauce.

To serve with tongue, there is pimento sauce.

Melt two tablespoons of butter, 2 tablespoons flour and ½ teaspoon of salt. Stir until smooth. Add one cup of meat broth and cook until thick. Boil one minute, add 2 tablespoons of lemon juice and two chopped pimentos.

Mint Butter.

To accompany lamb, mint sauce and mint jelly come at once to mind. Here is a recipe for mint butter for broiled chops.

One-half cup minced mint leaves, ½ cup butter, 2 tablespoons lemon juice and a few grains of cayenne are needed. Cream the butter and add the minced mint leaves. Add the lemon juice and cayenne, beat well until it is creamy and place on ice until you are ready to use it.

Author, 26, Credits Pretty Girl With Inspiring Winning Novel

"Bishop of Havana" Writer Tells All About It; Lives in Capital.

A very pretty girl she was who gave 26-year-old Pendleton Hogan the idea for his novel, "The Bishop of Havana."

Published a week ago by Ives Washburn, Inc., of New York, this first printed effort of the engaging young Virginian already has been chosen alternate on the October book-of-the-month club list.

With genuine reluctance, Pendleton admitted it happened when he was 21. The summer following his junior year at Roanoke College in Salem, Va., he had motored to Florida.

"I went through the old fort at St. Augustine," he explained. "A very attractive girl—I never knew her name—was acting as guide. College girls do that down there to help pay their schooling, you know.

Sees Bishop's Room.

"We came to a certain room. The girl said, 'This is the room in which the Bishop of Havana stayed on his annual visits to St. Augustine, which was part of his see.'

"The book grew from that sentence, which stayed with me. I couldn't shake it off. The whole story takes place after a certain three-months' summer visit of the bishop to St. Augustine in 1797."

The young man doesn't know whether it was something about the girl herself, or what she said, that fastened the eventful statement in his mind. He admits he likes girls, although:

"I'm not in love now," he declared. "My trouble is, I'm always falling in and out of love. It keeps me in constant turmoil."

The appealing directness of his clean blue eyes, the determined set of his strong young jaw, were oddly at variance with his shy reserve. He's very handsome—in a clear-skinned, sun-tanned, boyish sort of way.

Works in Washington.

He's got a job here in Washington, has had it for four years, and hopes to keep it indefinitely. He has no intention of saying or doing anything which might jeopardize it.

"It's sort of public relations work, publicity and advertising," he admitted. "I like my work. I put a lot into it. I think it's necessary to have a regular job, with exact requirements as to hours and output, to arrive at an adjusted life. It is for me at any rate."

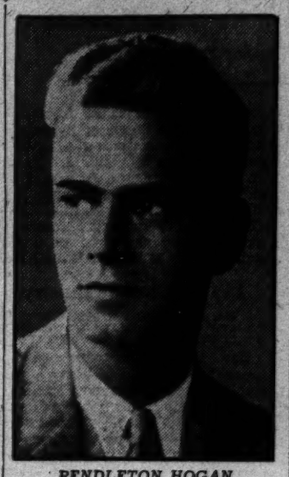

Although even now he is working on a second novel: "—a problem novel in a modern setting—", he maintains he considers writing his avocation rather than his job. Last summer he visited France, Germany, England and Switzerland, in search of background for the tale. Part of it may be laid in Washington, but of that he is not yet positive. A great deal of writing and rewriting will be involved before it is ready, if ever, for publication.

Pendleton has two younger sisters. He is of Scotch-Irish derivation on his father's side, with French and Dutch strain from his mother's family. The family has lived in Virginia for generations, without ever before having invaded the realms of authorship.

Tried Writing All His Life.

Pendleton thinks he must have started trying to write when he was three years old. He's been authorizing nonprofessionallly as long as he can remember, and when 14, wrote a novel. He doesn't know what became of it.

The material which eventually

was woven into the tale of "The Bishop of Havana" first saw the light of day in written form when submitted as part of his English class work during his senior year at Roanoke College.

"It was then a short story. The professor liked it, I guess. I got A on the strength of it," he said.

The following year, in 1928, young Hogan came to Washington, and for three years made his home at Sigma Chi fraternity house. Last year he took a postgraduate course at George Washington University and, to get ahead with his writing in his spare time, "moved out of the bedlam of the fraternity house." He now lives with friends at 1523 Allison street northwest.

He spends a great deal of time reading and, according to his statement, reads everything and anything. He likes all outdoor sports and is fond of the society of boys and girls his own age. He is afraid he spends more time than he really should "dancing and playing around."

As to what he intends to do with his future, he "hasn't the vaguest idea."

"I just want to live and enjoy myself as I go along," he said.

Modern Youth "Pretty Fine."

"Modern young people," in this boy's opinion, "are pretty fine; extremely well-rounded, knowing something about everything, from sports to the best in arts and science."

"I like older people, too," said Pendleton. "I like to talk to them. One learns a great deal from them. They are mostly so normal and natural and not at all narrow.

"But when there are so many intelligent people all around, why should I inject my opinion?" he queried, defensively.

The most satisfying recognition which has come to young Hogan as the result of his latest novel is a tribute from Christopher Morley. In a letter for distribution among book-of-the-month club members, the famous author wrote, in part:

"There is an engaging magic in this story of the Spanish gypsy boy who became the Bishop of Havana. Sunlight and the tone of bells, blue tropic air and warm white dust, women in love and all manner of alluring mischief fill its pages . . . The secret of the good Bishop's past, the dancing girl who ends as a persecuted old crone . . . the fulfillment of the prophecy are told in urbane and sparkling prose. A most winning fancy with warm Southern blood in its veins. Mr. Hogan will be heard from again."

Washington Women in Welfare Work

Mrs. Wilson Compton Active in Many Welfare Undertakings.

Community Chest officials refer to Mrs. Wilson Compton as a "veritable dynamo of energy" in chest work and the chest is only one of several welfare outlets for her activities. Mrs. Compton is a member of the finance committee of the Y. W. C. A., board of Neighborhood House, executive committee of the Women's Crusade, executive committee of the Council of Social Agencies and is chairman of the important recreation committee of the council.

On the Chest board of trustees, Mrs. Compton also is a member of the "cabinet" in charge of the speakers' unit, a member of the budget committee and a tireless worker on the special gifts unit. On the speakers' unit she has charge of the important committee for obtaining openings for speakers.

"It behooves every woman interested in the future of Washington to take an interest in welfare work this year," she says. "For the last three years social workers of Washington have been forced to neglect their real job of providing a well-rounded social program for the city in order to meet emergency needs, brought about by unforeseen conditions. Now that the Government has taken over the emergency situation we can best serve Washington by no longer neglecting our own social program, which involves meeting 'human needs' other than those of mere food, clothing and shelter.

"For the woman who wants to have a part in welfare work in the city there is an opening for a volunteer in almost every agency in the Chest. The council of social agencies maintains a volunteer service bureau and will be glad to enter the name of any person desiring to do welfare work."

Fashion Forces Stately Posture Upon Women

Were it not for the fact that women are seeing the necessity for correct posture, the fashions of 1933 would be completely devoid of smartness.

Elegance in attire presupposes dignity, even regality, in carriage. It is as essential to health as it is to beauty, furthermore. And styles which build health, as this season's do, have much to be said for them.

And what a change has taken place! You see creatures who only yesterday couldn't shake the slumping habit. Shoulders were round, chests deflated, abdomens protruded and a band of unnecessary fat settled at the waist. But now all that is past. Once they lopped, now they walk and how they walk—the carriage of queens.

Maybe Fashions Did It.

Maybe the fashions are inspiring this new, straight posture. Maybe it was the regal bearing of some of the popular Parisian mannequins that originally inspired the new fashions. In any case, they are getting along together famously.

Slumping sisters might just as well save their money. It will be lost if spent on the new styles. Without the proper figure to fit on and proper posture to carry them off, the air of elegance is completely missing. All the romance and feminine appeal is lost.

Hold Heads Up!

But, if all seems right with the world, and there's no chip on your shoulder, and your head is held high, your spine straight, your abdomen in, your chest out, your shoulders relaxed and down a bit; if you swing gracefully from the hips as you walk and toe straight ahead; if you sit up straight, too, holding your chin horizontal—well, the whole fashion world is yours to choose from. And though they make you lovelier, these new creations, you'll probably "make" them, too. You may voice an approving "MMM" when you behold them on the clothes hanger, but those who see you in the new gowns will declare a delightful "Ah"—or what is it they say when they mean "quite perfect?"

The gusher sprayed oil and mud on the new attire.

"It does that every time I wear new clothes," Russell explained.

Bootleggers on Relief Rolls Given Warning

Austin, Tex. (AP).—University professors, former legislators, doctors and lawyers have been listed on the Bexar County unemployment relief rolls, Solon Walker, director, testified in a hearing before the Texas Senate.

In addition, he said, numerous bootleggers, once prosperous, had applied for assistance.

"I told all the bootleggers we placed on the list that if I caught them selling booze I'd stop relief," Walker said.

Ancient stone fish barbs have been found, relics of fishing arrows used when the Indian went after tuna and yellowtail with a bow.

No End of Books

Conrad Aiken Forsakes Sussex Awhile to Visit This Country; John Strachey to Lecture at Columbia and Inspect America for Seven Weeks.

It takes a derrick to get Conrad Aiken out of Sussex, but he has arrived for a few days in New York and several months in this country. His novel, "Great Circle," has just been published in England.

John Strachey is to sail from England in time to reach Columbia University for a lecture on October 23. He will stay in this country seven weeks, for an acquaintance with America which his publishers hope may result in a book.

Phyllis Bentley, author of "Inheritance," a best-seller last year, has finished a new novel called "A Modern Tragedy" and taken a week off for a walking trip along the Old Roman Wall in northern England.

Somerset Maugham's collection of stories called "Ah King," just published in London and soon to be published in this country, by Doubleday Doran, contains "The Book Bag," a tale which Ray Long chose as one of the best 20 stories he had read in 20 years.

When Eugene O'Neill's "Strange Interlude" was produced, his refusal to give out advance copies of the text sent a shiver of pain through the dramatic critics, especially through Percy Hammond. On the occasion of the current production of "Ah Wilderness!" Mr. O'Neill has been just as careful. No copies were available before the "first night."

The Bubble Burst.

"THE SOUTH SEA BUBBLE," by Viscount Erleigh; Putnam, $1.50.

The question "Why should history, with a capital H, be the dull subject it is to so many readers?" is well asked on the cover of this well-handled resume of the famous eighteenth century financial crash. Exigencies of space and tempo to be maintained in the large tome leave room only for desiccated morsels of the small yet important happenings.

Erleigh has absorbed thoroughly the matter of his hillock in history and translated those feverish times into a most readable handbook. The rise and fall of the Ponzis of the day—the redoubtable John Law, Scotchman, who kissed the hands of duchesses in France; Sir John Blount, who put England "up to auction" and made millions for himself and friends—are chronicled in a style highly to be recommended to the historian if history is to become anything more to the layman than the dry bones of a century, crushed to dust and sprinkled on the leaves of a book.

Some taste of the grasp and style must be given: "For six frenzied months a tidal wave submerged the whole country, engulfing every class. Dukes lost fortunes and doorkeepers made them. Noblemen pawned their estates and booksellers endowed hospitals. The New Rich ostentatiously displayed their wealth and the New Poor their poverty. Only millionaires and bankrupts were fashionable; suicide became the vogue. The South Sea Co. itself was the Triton amongst a myriad minnows, while peers and poets, lawyers and lackeys, merchants and mountebanks, housewives and harlots jostled and fought for the chance of subscribing to companies promoted for every object that fraudulent ingenuity could concoct or avid gullibility digest."

Of such chaos and contrasts is the story told. First, "The Soap;" then "The Pipe;" next, "The Bubble" and, finally, "The Burst" is the way the story unfolds, and each section is more thrilling than the last. Modern hysteria is mirrored in this 200-year flashback, and but little of the statistical monotony common to ordinary books of the type is present to mar a running interest in the quick unfolding of events.

"The South Sea Bubble" is recommended unqualifiedly. It is accurate, racy, readable—which is what history with a capital H should be. DON BLOCH.

(A Novel.)

"THE BLIND JOURNEY," by G. Sheila Donisthorpe; Watt, $2.

"The Blind Journey," as the title suggests, is the story of a girl who fought against her Victorian upbringing to gain her independence. It tells of the struggle between a Victorian mother and a modern daughter who were an age apart. Blind to each other's worth, they journeyed through life in strife and opposition.

Jane, daughter of a stern father and domineering mother, lived a life of repression and subservience broken by an occasional rebellion. She saw that freedom would never be granted her and that at 50 she would be treated as a child. A final quarrel precipitated her separation from her mother, and at 23 she was free and independent in London. She married "Nickey," a dreamer and artist. Her struggles with his irresponsibility led to a gradual perception of the value of her mother's standards of regularity and order.

Apparently in the background of the story, but in reality its chief character, is Jane's mother. She was a tyrannical martinet, with a love so possessive that it repulsed its object. The story of her business acumen, which furnished a livelihood and education for Jane, and of her thoughtfulness and self-sacrifice is the story of motherhood everywhere. The sharpness of her Victorian judgment becomes mellowed by suffering. Her life of service was rich. In the comfortable establishment and success of "Jane, my daughter," her life found fulfillment.

The novel is not one of plot and action, but rather of character portrayal showing conflict between two generations. A wealth of detail makes us conscious of the background of London and English country life, but these do not detract from the theme of the separation and reconciliation of mother and daughter. In this story, the every day deeds of Jane and her mother, weaving at first a conflicting pattern, finally unite them. "The Blind Journey" becomes illuminated by the light of understanding. MARJORIE SHAW.

Leaders in the Ministry.

A study, "AMERICAN PREACHERS OF TODAY," by Edgar DeWitt Jones. (Bobbs-Merrill Co.), $2.00.

The shining company of the preaching brethren of today is paid just tribute in this most carefully edited work. In his first chapter on the "Age of Preaching," the author stresses the belief that because this is an age of able preachers there are no Henry Ward Beechers, Theodore Parkers, Phillips Brookses and George A. Gordons towering above their fellows. The author ventures the assertion that never before in American history have there been so many brilliant preachers as at the present hour.

With a true understanding of the trend of thought of the age, he has inscribed his book "To The Unknown Preacher, whose obscure and sacrificial life is hid with Christ in God and therefore fruitful forever."

The author believes that Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick, of Riverside Church, New York, occupied today one of the most preeminent pulpits of the Christian faith in America, if not in the world. Here, in the sanctuary of a $10,000,000 edifice and with the backing of John D. Rockefeller, who attached no strings or conditions, Dr. Fosdick is described as having the most extraordinary preaching opportunity of modern times.

The remarkable career of Merton S. Rice in Detroit and his refusal twice of election to a bishopship in the Methodist Episcopal Church demonstrates the greatness possible in the ranks of the ministry.

Likewise, Dr. Peter Sinslie, of the Christian Temple, is sometimes spoken of as the unordained Bishop of Baltimore.

In this tribute to exponents of the word of God of all faiths, Dr. Jones mentions particularly 18 ministers, priests and rabbis. With truth and dignity he commends their work.

Inferential Leads.

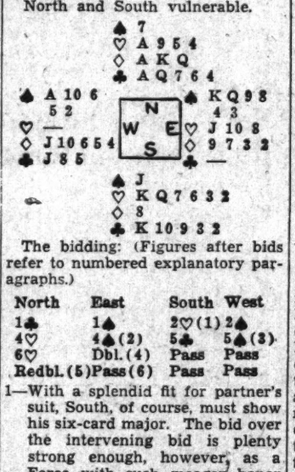

At the recent National Teachers' Convention in New York, which I conducted, the principal stress was placed upon questions of play. In my opinion the bidding has become pretty well standardized, and from now on leaders in the Contract world will be well advised to center their attention upon the very interesting problem of the correct leads and the correct plays.

For the most part, leads, as they are made today, are based upon theories accepted only because of their age. There has been, so far as most players and a number of experts are concerned, absolutely no advance made over the plays considered correct in the days when the great-grandfather of Contract—namely, Whist—reigned as the supreme intellectual pastime. In Contract Bridge, however, with the wealth of information afforded by the bidding of partner and opponents, there is afforded an opportunity frequently for inferential leads, placing partner either with a certain card or, conceivably, with a void in the suit.

During this convention one of the hands dealt in one of the Duplicate games was the following:

North, Dealer.

North and South vulnerable.

The bidding: (Figures after bids refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

North	East	South	West
1♣	1♠	2♡(1)	2♠
4♡	4♠(2)	5♣	5♠(3)
6♡	Dbl.(4)	Pass	Pass
Redbl.(5)	Pass(6)	Pass	Pass

1—With a splendid fit for partner's suit, South, of course, must show his six-card major. The bid over the intervening bid is plenty strong enough, however, as a Force with such meager honor holdings is unthinkable.

2—Not vulnerable, this bid is fully justified in view of partner's support.

3—Planning a sacrifice. West feels certain that North and South have a game in either hearts or clubs. By the show of strength he hopes to coax a Double, which will be less expensive to East and West players than a vulnerable game.

4—A very fine bid. If West understands the correct Slam lead convention, this clearly calls for the lead of some suit other than spades, and with West's holding and the North and South bidding, the desired lead should be as easy to read as an open book.

5—Not a good bid, but North hopes to frighten West into making some lead other than the one so clearly inferred by East's Double of the Slam.

6—While East is a little shaky in view of the fact that the opponents may hold the Ace of spades, there is nothing apparently that can be done. It would seem that the Slam must be defeated. If this is the case there is no point whatever in taking the penalty, however small.

West laid down the Ace of spades to get a look at the Dummy, and when he saw the top-card strength in diamonds, for no reason at all he decided to give up the hope of defeating the contract and helplessly led a diamond. It is, of course, obvious that a club at this time defeats the contract one trick, and that, had West been playing really good Bridge, an Opening lead of the club would have resulted in the defeat of the contract by a two-trick margin. As it was, as soon as all players had followed to the second lead, South drew to the adverse trumps and proceeded to lay down his hand for the remaining tricks.

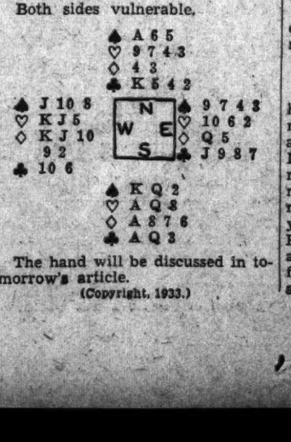

There was, as it turned out, a difference of more than 2900 points to the score as a result of failure to make the clearly indicated inferential lead as an Opening.

TOMORROW'S HAND

If North is playing a contract of three notrump and East makes the Opening lead of the club 7, what card should Declarer play from the Dummy, and why?

South, Dealer.

Both sides vulnerable.

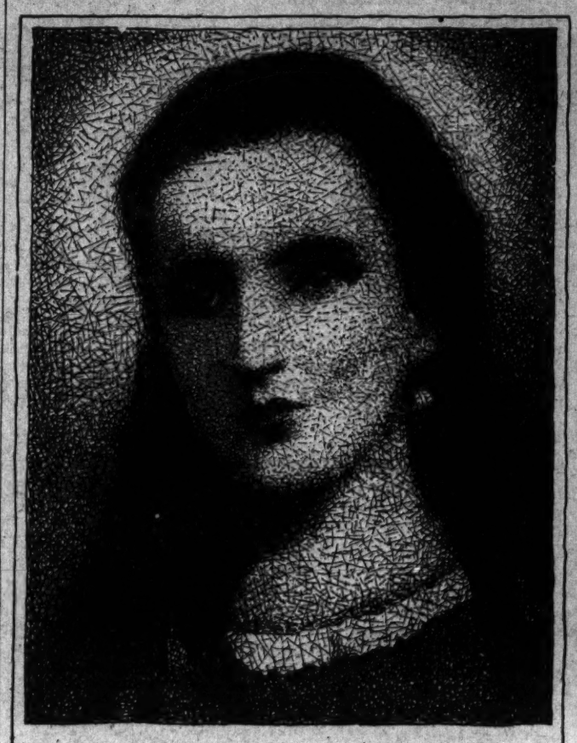

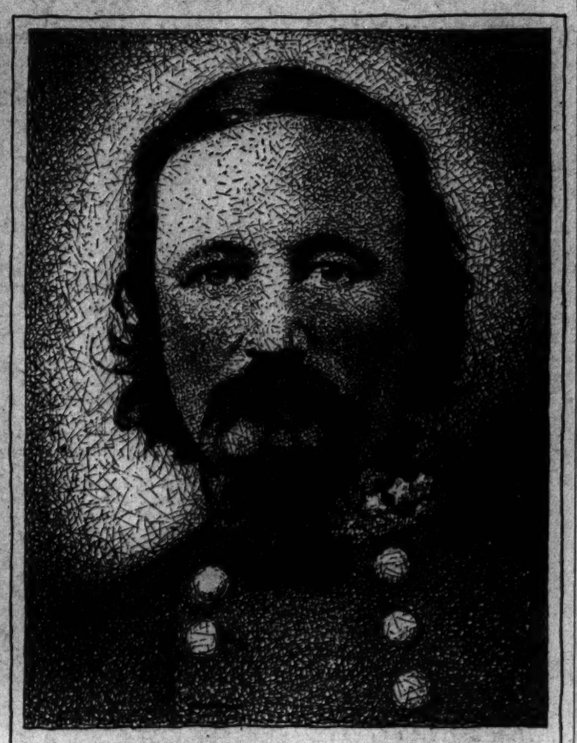

The hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

Half-Forgotten Romances of American History

La Salle Corbett—George Pickett

In strife-torn Dixieland, the romance of La Salle Corbett and George Pickett, fiery Civil War leader, found its full bloom. "Commanded" to appear at her suitor's side when the War Between the States was at its height, "Sally" was wed to the leader of the famous Pickett charge in Petersburg, Va., September 15, 1863. Pickett died in 1875, but his widow survived him by almost a half century.

Romance of La Salle Corbett and George Pickett Bloomed in War.

Elisabeth E. Poe.

Until some years ago there lived in a cozy apartment in Washington a gracious white-haired lady more than 70 years young, who was the heroine of one of the most beautiful romances in American history. She embodied in herself the memories of a Civil War courtship which had for witnesses and abettors not only the gallant men of her beloved Confederacy but such Union leaders as Gens. Grant and Ingalls, as well.

On the walls and in cabinets were photographs of the leaders of a Lost Cause, friends and associates of that Soldier of the South—George Pickett—whose name is linked immortally with one of the most daring and spectacular events in military history—Pickett's charge at Gettysburg.

Happy in her memories, her pictures and a handful of love letters written to her by Gen. Pickett during the war between the States, Mrs. La Salle Corbett Pickett dreamed away the last days of her long life, content that she had been "the darling of a hero."

What treasures they were to the few privileged to gaze on them, those love letters of yesterday, yellow pages, bearing, nearly all, a "London" imprint; yellow pages, crisp with age, carrying down through unrolling years, in neatly penciled or penned sentences, the flavor of the past; romantic, glamorous, sad, gay, tender, sweetly sentimental, imbued with unquestioning faith in Almighty God, in Virginia, in honor and in the brave young "war bride" of his love.

Many Comforted Her.

To this Washington apartment came many friends, among them Margaret Wilson, eldest daughter of President Woodrow Wilson, to solace Mrs. Pickett's last days with their tenderness and understanding of all the past had meant to her. To them, in her sweet, quavering voice, Mrs. Pickett would relate the story of her romance with the dashing George Pickett, every inch a soldier, whose heroic exploit at Gettysburg has been compared to the last stand of the Spartans at the Pass of Thermopolae.

As she talked, one would see a vision of the young Virginia cadet at West Point, trim in his cadet blue, a member of the famous graduating class of '46 at the Point, friend of many men who were to face him afterward on the red field of battle. Another glimpse would be seen of Pickett as a second lieutenant in the Mexican War, where he won recognition for distinguished service.

Pickett, a native of Richmond, Va., where he wsa born in 1825, had bright prospects before him in the Army of the United States. Like Lee, though, he was to push them all aside to serve his native State when the call came. When the War Between the States broke out, Capt. Pickett resigned from the United States Army and made his way to the Confederate camp, where he was appointed a brigadier general in the army of Northern Virginia. There his command quickly won the title of "The Game Cock Brigade."

Enters the Girl.

It was at this period of his life that a little Southern belle, La Salle Corbett, daughter of a distinguished Southern House, noted for statesmanship and leadership in the Old Dominion, first attracted his admiring attention.

She was a beauty and ardently for the Confederacy. Of all the officers who clamored for her hand none pleased her as did George Pickett, with his background of active service in the Mexican War lending a glamour to his present deeds.

The years have swallowed up the details of how they met. But we can well imagine how intense was the friendship that sprung up between them, for romance is a flower that blossoms at will on battlefields and in war days in every generation in which Mars ravages the earth.

At any rate, the war had not been in existence for many months before we see Gen. Pickett turning aside from command anxieties to write love letters to La Salle by the flickering light of a camp fire. Fortunately, these letters were preserved for posterity by Mrs. Pickett and it is a privilege all can enjoy to trace therein the progress of the romance.

Penned Ardent Notes.

Before he had received his rank of brigadier general we find Capt. Pickett inditing this ardent observance:

"Now, little one, if you had the very faintest idea how happy a certain captain in the C. S. A. would be to look into your beautiful, soul-speaking eyes and hear your wonderfully musical voice, I think you would let him know by wire where he could find you. I shall almost listen for the electricity which says, 'I am at—— Come.'

Alas, the Union troops thundered close behind the scattered armies of Pickett and Lee and while the gallant captain longed to see his dear one, there was no time for such gentle missions. He must, perforce, claim as his own that immortal message to Lucasta by Col. Lovelace, in which he declares:

Tell me not, Sweet, I am unkind;
That from the nunnery
Of thy chaste breast and quiet mind
To war and arms I fly.

True, a new mistress now I chase,
The first foe in the field;
And with a stronger faith embrace
A sword, a horse, a shield.

Yet this inconstancy is such
As you, too, shall adore;
I could not love thee, dear, so much
Loved I not Honor more.

The War Drags On.

The war years passed. La Salle was learning the lesson of patience all women must come to know when their men are at the front and her only consolation were his letters from the battlefield always charged with tenderness and thought for her. Close to his heart he treasured her letters with their pathetic undertone of fear for him, especially after he was wounded in one of the Virginia campaigns.

In April, 1863, Gen. Pickett wrote to La Salle, begging her to marry him at once.

"Come at once, my own, into this valley of the shadow of uncertainty and make certain the comfort that if I should fall I shall fall as your husband."

So They're Married.

'Now, my Sallie," he wrote to her, "your soldier is a soldier and never, even to himself, questions an order. His not to reason why. Darling, do you know what this means? Why, my little one, it means that you haven't one moment's respite. It means that you are to be Mrs. Gen. George E. Pickett, my precious wife, right away. It means that you are to fulfill your promise to come to me at a moment's notice. Yours, too, now, 'not to reason why,' but to obey and come at once."

And, as though a true soldier's wife, she did go. They were married at Petersburg, Va., on September 15, 1863.

Their romance remained true and sweet to the end, which came at his death in 1875, after they had some happy post-bellum days in Richmond, where he was engaged in the life insurance business.

Dashing Confederate Leader "Commanded" Her and She Came to Him.

Fate arranged it so she was to survive for almost a half century.

But with her in her desolation was the sweet memory that they had been granted his dearest wish—and hers—expressed by Gen. Pickett not long after their marriage when he said: "My darling, we want each other, and a home, with a spiked fence around it, and a key to the road gate, for us alone—just us, 'forever and forever-more.'"

What Today Means

"Libra."

If October 16 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 7 to 8:30 a. m., from 2 to 2:45 p. m. and from 5 to 6:10 p. m. The danger periods are from 10 to 11:15 a. m., from 3:30 to 4:30 p. m. and from 8 to 8:50 p. m.

Influences operating on this date will prove conducive to great business activity. Employes will be on edge and willing to work hard, while employers and executives will have clearly in mind just what they want. A general spirit of cooperation will be apparent. In the home confusion will tend to prevail and much dissatisfaction.

The child born on this October 16 will probably be kept running around in circles because of his sincere desire to please all people. Its winsome ways, its willingness to work hard and its ability to "catch on" to things quickly will attract attention from older people, and will do much to push this little one ahead rapidly.

If October 16 is the date of your birth, you will probably be blessed with an unusual run of good luck all through your life. This, of course, does not mean that you will not have to take your hard knocks along with the rest, but simply means that when the good things of life are given out, you will more than likely get a great abundance of them. You will not have to exert yourself to any great extent. You will probably be fortunate in having a large circle of friends who are very fond of you and who will be on the look-out for your best interests. Do not let yourself become the type who "sponges" off his friends and who accepts too readily and too much.

Born on October 16, you are an essentially kind and gentle person, one who speaks only if he has something of a constructive or cheerful nature to offer. You do not pass on gossip nor do you listen to it. When your personal rights and private affairs are interfered with you can be very blunt and then you do not hesitate to tell people right where to "head in." You take great pride in your community and whenever there is anything going on of a civic nature, it is not at all unlikely to find you a hard working committee member. Both the men and women are "honey" sort of people. They seem to be at their very best in their homes, where they try to keep open house as much as possible and where they, as hostess or host, can radiate that great charm which is so much a part of them. People born on this date make splendid parents and enjoy being with their children.

Successful people born on October 16:

William R. Shafter, soldier.
William H. Pancoast, surgeon.
Russell Sturgis, architect.

New School Plan Backed in Valley

Teachers Uphold Program in Shenandoah County.

Woodstock, Va., Oct. 15 (Spl.). Public school teachers of Shenandoah County have approved the State Board of Education's minimum educational program, providing a minimum school term of eight months and a teacher for each group of 25 to 40 pupils.

The program also provides for an annual State appropriation of $560 for each group of from 25 to 40 pupils, an allotment of $2 per child for free textbooks and $40 per year by the State for supervision.

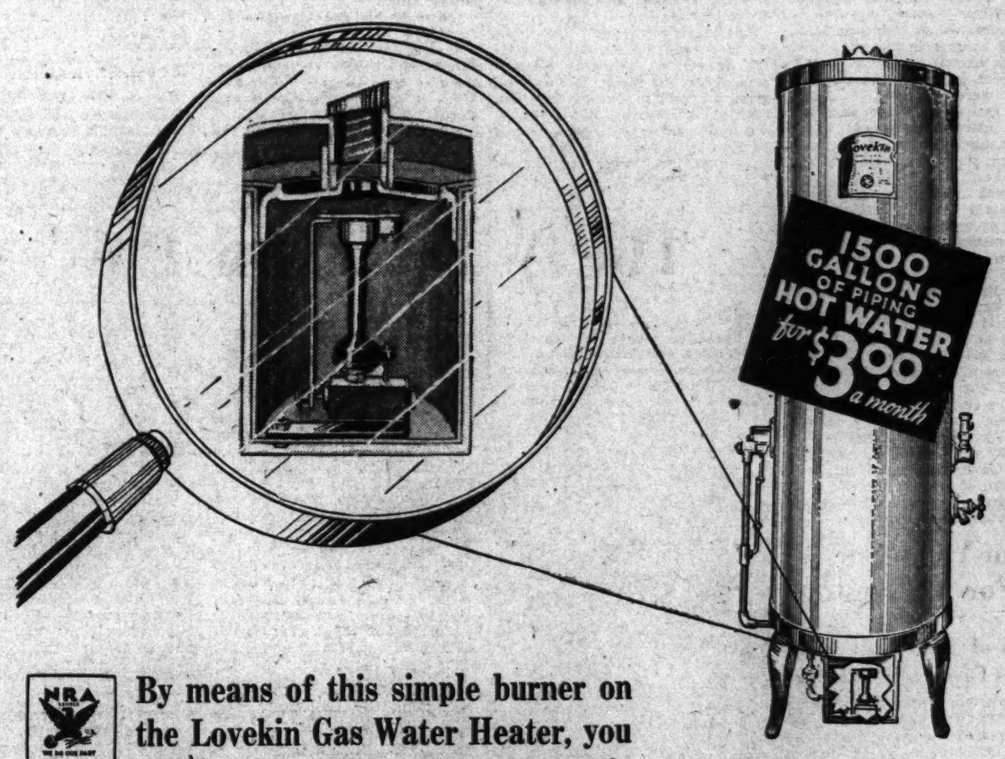

It is estimated this program will require $3,000,000 more annually than the State appropriated for the school year 1932-33. School officials declare such an appropriation would permit reducing local school taxes 22 per cent.

Buy-Now Drive Gives Business Upward Push

Best Pick-Up in Retail Volume Is Revealed by Wide Survey.

New York, Oct. 15 (AP).—The consumer again stirred himself last week to tint the business outlook with rosier hues.

While industrial barometers still indicated somewhat unsettled conditions, mercantile reviews reported the best pick-up in retail trade in weeks.

The first week of the NRA "Buy Now" drive, coinciding with the Columbus Day holiday week, and ideal shopping weather, marked the "most impressive pick-up of the fall season," said Dun & Bradstreet, reporting "sharp increases in retail distribution, particularly in rural communities."

Power in Decline.

The weekly statistics on electric power production, and the movement of revenue freight, showed small recessions, but the decline in freight movement was due to a drop in coal shipments, evidently reflecting labor difficulties, which more than offset a substantial gain in merchandise loadings.

The total of 654,428 cars as reported for the latest week, was 7,399 under the previous week. Miscellaneous freight, however, gained 12,607 cars, while coal receded 19,219.

The small decline in electric power production reduced the gain over 1932 to 9.3 per cent for the latest week, compared to 10.2 per cent the week before. Automobile production, as calculated by Cram's Service, dipped only 1,358 cars to 37,986, and while some recession in retail sales was indicated, it appeared that the October slump this year would be less than for this month in any of the past three years.

Steel is Hesitant.

The steel industry remained somewhat hesitant, despite a step-up in ingot production of 2 points, to 40 per cent of capacity, as estimated by "Steel."

This authority said the increase was due to specifications on contracts expiring this week, and that in view of the small volume of new business, "the prospects are now for a rather sharp reduction."

Lighter manufacturing lines, however, continued to provide considerable cheer. The pick-up in retail trade has been accompanied by more active wholesale purchases of consumers goods. Woolen mills continued to operate at a high rate, some slight gains were reported in cotton textile production, radio manufacturers were said to be increasing their output, shoe companies were reported helped by settlement of labor difficulties.

Retail Buying Increases.

Increased retail buying has embraced a wide range of merchandise. While wearing apparel has been prominent on the upswing, increased volume in household furnishings, electric appliances, heating equipment, groceries and packaged goods, were reported in many areas. Dun & Bradstreet said "consumer interest has spread to the most inclusive range of articles in evidence since the early part of September."

A break in raw material prices, particularly grains, reflected hasty selling by speculators who thought the Treasury's refunding operation indicated that the national price-raising endeavor would follow a more conservative course than expected earlier, and may have been somewhat unsettling. It was pointed out, however, that the Government is still determined to elevate price levels, and that only a small part of the distance back to the tentative objective of 1926 has thus far been traversed, so that substantially higher prices seems indicated by next spring, at least.

The Government's pressing of its campaign to reopen closed banks, thus freeing some $2,000,000,000, was watched hopefully.

Lean Years End For Yellowstone

Total of 1933 Visits Compares Favorably With '25.

Yellowstone Park, Wyo., Oct. 15 (U.P.).—After three consecutive years of decreased travel to Yellowstone Park, 1933 brought an increase of 4,134 visitors over the preceding year. Supt. Roger W. Toll has reported.

The 1933 increase picked up the line of ever-growing attendance in the park where it was dropped in 1930. To 1930 increases had been noted each year since 1919, in the number of park visitors, reaching a peak of 260,697 in 1929.

A total of 161,938 visitors entered the park in 1933, a figure comparable to that of 1925, when 154,282 visitors came to the playground. By far the greater number of the park visitors entered by automobile, the number coming in this manner to the vast playground totaling 134,419.

Officials Face Cut In Clifton Forge

Overdue Taxes Listed by City at $87,000.

Clifton Forge, Va., Oct. 15 (Spl.). More than $87,000 is owed the city in delinquent taxes, the September financial report revealed. Slightly more than $1,000 in back taxes was collected during October.

T. P. Halloran, finance committee chairman, reported municipal finances are in a grave condition that might necessitate a second cut in officials' salaries, reduction in city employes and curtailment of the school term.

He estimated the city will be in debt approximately $40,000 by the end of October.

Bank Liquidation Plan Sound

Government Taking Wise Course In Making Deposits Available

By Ralph West Robey.

No impending development in many weeks has created as much interest among those concerned with appraising the immediate future of trade and prices in this country as the plan of the administration for handling failed banks. Announcement of it was expected last Wednesday, but various legal difficulties arose which caused delay, and the plan was not made public until late last night. Upon the interpretation of terms, more than anything else, will rest the conclusions of many of our best analysts on the probable nature and extent of any improvement within the next few months.

In broad outline the plan already was known with fair accuracy. It was understood that a new organization was to be established that would take over the good but "frozen" assets of closed institutions in exchange for cash. Further, it was understood the new bank—the liquidating organization—would derive its funds from the Reconstruction Finance Coarporation, or perhaps to some extent directly from the Federal Reserve banks. The period of bank failures to be covered had varied somewhat in the dispatches, but it was thought that all institutions which had failed since January 1, 1933, would be included.

Basis for Taking Over the Assets Still Was Unknown.

What was not known was the basis upon which the "good but frozen" assets of the closed banks would be taken over by the liquidating corporation. That is, nevertheless, the crux of the whole plan. Further, it was the point which caused so much concern among business analysts, because upon this rests the significance of the organization from the point of view of getting purchasing power into the hands of the public. In bald terms, it was this which was held would determine whether under the plan we were to have a liquidating corporation or an inflation machine.

The former, of course, is what we need. Of the two or three billions of deposits tied up in closed banks in this country a large proportion is covered by good assets. The problem of making the deposits available, therefore, merely is a question of realizing upon these assets, or of, in effect, converting them into cash for the benefit of the depositors.

Even under the best of circumstances, nevertheless, this is a slow and expensive process. At present, because of the volume of assets involved, on the one side, and the thinness of markets as a result of the unwillingness of investors to place money in relatively long-term or slow-liquidating obligations, on the other side, such conversion is virtually impossible. Certainly it could be done only at an unreasonable expense to depositors.

Task of the Government Is to Replace the Usual Demand

The only way in which the deposits could be made available, accordingly, is for the Government to step in and replace the demand which normally would exist for such assets. In doing this, obviously, it will be following a sound policy if it advances not only what the assets currently could be sold for in the market, but the amount which a prudent investor would consider their real value. Later, if this proves to have been too low, a final settlement for the balance would be made.

It should be equally obvious, however, that it would not be sound financial policy to take over the assets on a purely arbitrary basis with little or no regard to their real worth. Then the Government no longer would be so much engaged in operating a liquidating corporation as it would be in running a philanthropic enterprise for the particular benefit of depositors in failed banks. Such philanthropy, of course, would be inflation to the extent the payments exceeded the worth of the assets.

From a preliminary examination of the announcement it appears the Government intends to hold the plan to the limits of a liquidating corporation. If this proves to be the case, it will be one of the most constructive moves yet taken by this administration in its fight to hasten recovery.

Speculative Stocks Decline OnRefund Plan

New York, Oct. 15 (AP).—A lightening of speculative accounts, inspired by the "sound money" implications of the Government's fourth Liberty loan refunding plan, swerved stocks this week from the middle of the road course they had been quietly following.

The market's setback Friday was accepted in Wall street as a normal consequence of waning hopes for currency inflation.

The Government's refinancing program in its broader aspects, bankers pointed out, carried a tacit indication of adherence to conservative policies. Several possibilities suggested themselves, among them the imminence of currency stabilization and a revival of the bond market, dormant for several years. Whatever turn events may take, the first reaction to the inferences in the Liberty loan news was along normal lines—stocks and speculative commodities declined, high-grade bonds improved and the dollar had a vigorous rally against foreign currencies.

Meanwhile, inflation of the credit variety remains a major weapon n the Government's arsenal. Plans are being pushed to reopen banks and otherwise facilitate recovery through liberal use of Federal funds distributed by various administrative agencies old and new. There has actually occurred at New York a consderable expansion of commercial credit by the big banks; this is a seasonal move, but it may have added significance now.

Labor difficulties and efforts to settle them continued to receive wide publicity. Most observers have associated this situation with the hesitancy of business and stocks.

Tunnel Projected Under Mont Blanc

Would Bring Rome Closer to Paris; Benefit Swiss.

Paris, Oct. 15 (U.P.).—Mont Blanc, Europe's highest mountain, soon may be pierced by a vehicular tunnel.

The eternal snows of this peak, which look down on three countries, soon may see a thriving traffic from Chamonix to the beautiful valley of Aosta, in Italy, uniting France and Italy in closer bonds, and bringing Switzerland into the stream because the direct vehicular line from Paris to Rome under Mont Blanc would pass through Geneva.

State Councilor Antoine Bron, of the Canton of Geneva, is actively interested in the tunnel and has been conducting negotiations with the French Minister of Public Works, Paganon. A geological report already has been completed, and the plans of the French engineer, M. Monod, for a railroad tunnel in 1907, will be used with little modification.

Polish Coins Honor King.

Warsaw, Oct. 15 (AP).—The Warsaw mint is issuing 10-zloty coins, equivalent to $1.70, bearing King John Sobieski's effigy in commemoration of the 250th anniversary of his victory over the Turks at Vienna.

Copper Prices Break Under Smelter Sales

Tin Is Easier as Dollars Firm; Zinc Remains Unchanged.

New York, Oct. 15 (AP).—Copper prices broke a cent per pound this week under offerings by customs smelters to the basis of 8 cents for electrolytic.

The decline was attributed variously to a desire to seek a level which would attract buyers, accumulation of scrap supplies and dissatisfaction over the failure of the industry thus far to reach a voluntary agreement on a code under the NRA program.

A fair domestic demand developed at the lower level, but larger producers were not competitive. Moderate foreign sales were also reported at a lower basis.

Tin Is Easier.

Tin also was easier. Its decline was attributed principally to firmness of the dollar in foreign exchange and action of other markets. Buyers remained cautious and only limited business was reported, although some tin plate mills reopened owing to improved labor conditions and mills were still said to have a comfortable backlog of orders.

Trade advices predicted an increase in the basic production quota would be authorized at the meeting of the international tin committee in London late this month.

Although zinc was quotably unchanged, an easier undertone developed in sympathy with other markets as well as dullness of demand generally and some sellers were believed willing to accept slight concessions, according to market reports.

Lead Continues Steady.

Lead continued steady with a moderate demand reported from various consuming branches for October and November delivery. While buying was unevenly distributed from time to time demand was generally said to have been equal to smelter output.

Antimony remained dull and nominally unchanged, although slight concessions were said to be available on bids in some directions.

Conditions in the steel market were quiet, fourth-quarter buying thus far being described as light. With unfilled orders on mill books declining, need for sustaining orders for public works and rails through Government assistance was being stressed. A more cheerful view of the labor situation, however, was reported. Pig iron inquiry was not large but shipments on old orders were fairly well sustained.

Virginian Church Lists Debt Absence

Luray, Va., Oct. 15 (Spl.).—The Field Methodist Church at Shenandoah reported that during the past year the congregation raised $2,700 for religious purposes.

The ministerial budget was placed at $1,314; budget for benevolence, $444; while $500 was set aside for "other charitable objects."

Up From Politics—the Races

The Week-End Thrills at Laurel Far Surpass Our Capital Dramas

By William Harlan Hale.

Laurel and Washington may be only 15 miles apart, but there is really no comparison. There is a glamour to the horse racing of the former which the politics of the latter—even in times such as these—never quite achieve. And, if one must have politics, there are actually more politicians to be seen during a big afternoon in the Laurel grand stand than in a whole week on the legislative boulevards of Washington.

The thought occurs that perhaps the races are themselves a heightened, more glamourous version of politics. All the same elements are there: the motley crowd—the electorate—each member of which has his sure tips and his certain prophecies; the race horses—the political candidates—who are set to run around the same old course, at the signal of the bell; the jockeys, their campaign managers; the trainers, their Mark Hannas, or, if you will, their Brain Trusts; the owners, the "interests" behind them.

And as for the bookies, the handicappers with their betting odds, and all the touts of the turf, what are they but the press, which with varying information encourages our speculations upon the future? What are the pari-mutuel machines but a roaring parody of the ballot boxes, and what are the hundred thousand betters on Equipoise but the millions who, taking the least chances, vote the straight organization ticket?

The parallel is not, of course, exact: the race track lacks the democratic touch of politics; nor is it interested in protecting, at all costs, "the American home." Its moral conscience is not quite so delicate: it is not—except in the State of New York—nearly so hypocritical about the sin of gambling as politicians have been up to now about the sin of sousing.

But otherwise there are profound similarities. The crowd waits, with genial unconcern and gossipy ignorance, during the half hour or so between races. As the field finally gathers at the barrier, however, the lagging interest suddenly reawakens to a high pitch of enthusiasm. Suddenly important "issues" appear: the slowness of the track, the news that the favorite has a sore ligament, the appearance of—now for that obvious, expected phrase—a dark horse.

Suddenly the crowd ceases admiring itself and begins reviling that chestnut 2-year-old, that is always starting off before the bell, or, once the race has begun, screaming down the horse that has the rail for swerving out at the furlong pole. The once urbane congregation is transformed into a writhing, hoarsely shouting mass, seeing nothing but visions of financial ruin or of material triumph. The well dressed people, who before had been chatting amiably together in a box are now jumping on chairs, throwing hats, and yelling each other down with frantic appeals to their galloping favorite.

And then there is the upset. In the fourth race at Laurel an unknown, Adamite, outruns Grey Glade and Toy Time, the favorites. As, after it is all over, he trots back to the judges' stand, there are ill-mannered boos from the crowd, as if they had found something they did not like in his campaign.

But then, a moment later, the parimutuel figures go up on the board, Adamite pays $51.60 for the $2 straight ticket. And his supporters, the comparatively few, who had flaunted tradition by putting their money on him, give a high, an almost hysterical, shout. They have gotten a new deal.

Puerto Rico's External Trade For 1933 Totals $130,000,000

Ninety-Four Per Cent of Business Is With United States; Volume Represents $17,000,000 Decline Over Previous Year.

San Juan, P. R., Oct. 15 (AP).—Puerto Rico's external trade was $130,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30 last, according to preliminary customs figures. Ninety-four per cent of this trade was with the United States, a new record.

The total trade figures reflect low commodity prices of the past year and mark a decline of over $17,000,000 from the previous year and reach the lowest level since 1916. The apparent balance of trade in favor of the island was $20,500,000.

Total exports reached a value of $75,356,455 as compared with $86,416,938 in 1932. Of the total exports shipments those to the United States were valued at $73,338,298 and those to foreign countries, $2,018,157.

Imports were valued at $54,759,067 of which goods valued at $48,900,000 came from the United States and $5,859,067 from foreign countries.

Total domestic trade, with the United States, amounted to $122,288,298, while trade with all foreign countries was valued at $7,877,124. For the previous fiscal year total domestic trade was estimated at $136,427,657 and total foreign trade $11,225,382.

Total customs collections for the year were $2,325,013 as compared with $2,560,501 the previous year, the highest on record. From the collections $2,035,000 was paid into the insular treasury as compared with $2,250,000 in 1932.

Only twice in the past 10 years, in 1924 and 1929, following the hurricane, has the apparent balance of trade been against the island. The favorable balance for the 10-year period exceeds $94,000,000.

Sugar Heads Exports.

Sugar, raw and refined, led all exports for the year just closed. Raw sugar exports during the fiscal year totaled 727,202 tons valued at an average of slightly more than $60 a ton, a few cents under the average price of $60.43 for 1932, while 85,102 tons of refined sugar shipped during the year had an average value of $82 per ton.

Other export estimates included: Cotton manufactures, such as dresses, underwear, pajamas, &c., made on the island, $10,432,672; tobacco, $4,400,000; cigars, $1,284,289; Fruit—Grapefruits, $805,568, and pineapples valued at $1,212,658.

Among the leading items of foreign imports were fish, $785,083; fuel oil, $341,627; fertilizers, $1,203,805; jute bags, $72,765; sugar cane, $352,489.

Curb Market Rules Steady During Week

Final Selling Drive Trims Prices; Trading Averages 201,000 Shares.

New York, Oct. 15 (AP).—The curb market ruled dull and fairly steady last week in the sessions preceding the Columbus Day holiday, but on Friday, when other markets weakened, sufficient selling appeared to send many departments lower.

Metals and alcohols were the principal loser, while oils and a number of specialties also yielded. Utilities resisted better than other divisions, suffering little more than cancellation of small gains recorded at the beginning of the week.

A number of specialties were in speculative favor at periods and included issues of Celanese, Tubize Chatillon, Celluloid and Technicolor Alminum Co. of America swung widely at times, but failed to record progress.

Heaviness in metals was coincident with selling in that division on the big board. Newmont Mining and New Jersey Zinc yielded liberally.

Liquidation in alcohols centered on such leaders as Hiram Walker and Distillers Corporation-Seagrams. National Distillers News, a recent addition to the list, followed the general trend.

Activity was about on a par with the previous week, averaging around 201,000 shares per each full five-hour session.

Ryland Again Head Of Manufacturers

Virginia Convention Ends at Roanoke.

Roanoke, Va., Oct. 15 (AP).—The eleventh annual convention of the Virginia Manufacturers Association adjourned here yesterday after electing officers and instructing the directors to select the 1934 convention city.

James F. Ryland, of Richmond, was reelected president and Fred Pilcher, of Petersburg, was reelected treasurer. Others elected were Lee Long, of Dante, first vice president, and H. C. Neren, Roanoke, second vice president.

Directors elected were Thomas B. Stanley, Stanleytown; A. Obici, Suffolk; Thomas J. Wallner, Pulaski; Henry E. McWane, Lyunchburg; W. C. Deming, Front Royal; and Charles Johnson, Norfolk.

Rag Trade Picks Up After Long Lean Period

Memphis, Tenn., Oct. 15 (AP).—Take it from a man who knows, the rag business is beginning to look up after lean years.

In affluent days before the depression people didn't wear their clothes long, but when hard times came they patched their old garments to make them last as long as posssible, says Cecil McKinnnon, a veteran of the trade here. Therefore, the supply of rags is inadequate to meet the demand. And that means higher prices for the rags the rag man sells.

"Gas" Tax Rebate Argued in Court

Judge Gann Will Decide on Legality of Law.

Richmond, Va., Oct. 15 (AP).—Judge Julian Gunn, in the Richmond City Circuit Court yesterday, heard arguments on the constitutionality of the special session act giving dealers within a 15-mile radius of the State line a refund on the gasoline tax, where the adjacent State has a tax of less than 3 cents a gallon, and later took the case under advisement.

The suit was brought by dealers in Fredericksburg against some 175 dealers in Arlington County, who under the recent law will be given a rebate in the tax since the District of Columbia has a tax of only 3 cents a gallon, while Virginia has a tax of 5 cents, exclusive of the 1 cent tax by the Federal Government.

Permanent Reform Seen in Bank Code

Public Demand for Change Is Met, Executive Holds.

New York, Oct. 15 (AP).—F. N. Shepherd, executive manager of the American Bankers Association, said today that the bankers' code "contains possibilities of the major part of the banking reform desired by the public, the Government and the bankers alike."

The code becomes effective tomorrow.

"Insofar as the code aids in elimination of loose or uneconomic practices from banking," Shepherd said, "it will confer permanent benefits on the Nation's banking structure and rebound to the welfare of depositors aside from all questions of its function as an emergency measure."

Epidemic of "Organizing Fever" Hits Hollywood—Miss Cornell Returns Soon

Players Guild Adds to Chain Of New Unions

All Affect Older Academy; Night Life in Capital; Theater Gossip.

The "organizing fever" which has become epidemic among the people who make the movies, it is reported in press dispatches from Hollywood, continues to whip up the temperature and increase the blood pressure of the collective film body.

Each change of season so far this year, it is pointed out, has brought a vigorous manifestation of the urge to unite in a common cause for the preservation of mutual interests—not as one body embracing the entire industry, however, but as a collection of smaller, clannish groups comprising special and distinct divisions of the business that is said to represent the Nation's fifth industry in point of magnitude.

This fall's contribution to screenland's new societies has been the recently formed Screen Actors Guild, of which Eddie Cantor has been elected president, and which was precipitated by the threat of a salary-control board during code hearings for the industry held in Washington before Deputy Administrator Rosenblatt.

Summer Strike.

Summer, it will be recalled, ushered in a major strike of sound technicians, the joint voice of organized craftsmen protesting what they construed to be studio injustice. For a time this action on the part of the artisans so essential to sound-picture making threatened to paralyze the industry. "Too Much Harmony," now in its third week at the Metropolitan, is said to be one of the pictures made during the strike and to reflect an unevenness in recording that bespeaks that fact. It may be said to bespeak it so mildly as to leave no impression whatever upon the mind of the casual layman enjoying the "Boo-boo-booing" of Bing Crosby and his associates.

Spring, to continue the retracing of the season in inverted order, saw the beginning of the Screen Writers' Guild, now some 500 strong, for the protection of individual and collective rights—or writes!—of its members.

Winter is coming on space, and what kind of a winter it will be for the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences remains to be seen. Each of these independent organizations has, of course, taken something either from the personnel or the enthusiasm of the Academy membership.

Academy Represents All.

The Academy, with its five branches, includes members of all divisions of the picture industry—actors, producers, writers, directors and technicians. Of these divisions, only the producers, with their association, and the technicians, with their labor unions, heretofore have had separate organizations. Now, needless to say, all that is changed.

The Academy, meanwhile, goes its quiet way, unperturbed, on the surface, at least, by admitted withdrawals in favor of the newer organizations.

The outcome of all this strengthening of the lines, reallocation of forces and "digging in" against the launching of a sudden and unexpected assault, leads to unbridled speculation and keen interest in the moves of a complicated "game" on the part of the innocent bystander.

The United States has as its slogan, "E Pluribus Unum." It will be worth watching to see if the picture industry can do better with one which freely translated might mean, "Out of One, Many."

His many friends in the National Capital, where he served for many months as manager of the Fox Theater, both before and after it came under the managerial direction of Loew's, Inc., will be interested to know that Harry Crull, until recently London manager for Loew's, is now resident manager of Loew's Valencia Theater at Jamaica, Long Island. Mr. Crull was succeeded in London by Charlie Raymond, recalled from Johannesburg, South Africa, who formerly was managing director of the Rialto Theater in this city.

Going West.

Routed out of their beds practically in the middle of the night to preview the latest vehicle for the talents of the cinema's reigning rowdy among its distaff artistes, the dramatic desks of the local press were rendered virtually gaga by the roistering ribaldry of Mae West in "I'm No Angel," in the private projection room of the Fox Film Exchange, Saturday morning at 11.

While there has been made an obvious attempt to mollify in some degree the raucous humor and blatant roughness of "She Done Him Wrong," this new manifestation of the West penchant for frankness in matters concerning the sexes and glibness in the glossaries of the honky-tonks is no lily-white purity crusade!

A Swell Job.

"I'm No Angel," in its proper classification, however, is an especially skillful and noteworthy job. Dealing in large measure with the small-time carnival and big-time circus lots, it reveals an accurate and minute knowledge of the psychology and the practical operation of the ballyhoo, the shillaber and the easy-money grifter. It is a showman's picture, evidently made by showmen.

Miss West, as goes without saying, is gorgeous as Tira, the carnival cooch-dancer who becomes a big-time lion tamer. When she begins to rub elbows with New York's "400" and transplants her amorous activities from the tan bark to a swank penthouse, both she and the movement of the play become considerably more conventional than the public has been led to expect of this particular star. But, even so, Miss West will not be mistaken for the embodied spirit of chastity perched on any pedestal of rectitude. She is a hard, tough gal, only a little softened and sentimentalized by the gentler impulses of her sex.

Some Parts Grate.

There are certain aspects of "I'm No Angel" that grate a bit on the finer sensibilities, but all are the result of a rigorous adherence to the requirements of an honest characterization of the central figure in the story. Tira was a rough and ready product of the grind shows to whom it came natural to accept the servants in her later palatial penthouse on a footing of social equality. Ladies of her stamp are like that—so one hears.

One thing is certain. "I'm No Angel" will open Thursday midnight to a capacity crowd at the Palace. It is that kind of a picture—with enough peppery speeches punctuating its dialogue to return value received to the shock seekers, even if they keep their eyes closed throughout the showing!

Achmed Abdullah, Oxonian, soldier of fortune, author, playwright and adventurer, in the first of a series of reminiscences being published in a popular monthly, undertakes to "debunk" the late David Belasco, with whom he was once closely associated, to a degree that will outrage the ardent admirers of the master showman. While Mr. Abdullah does not impugn the worth of Belasco's contributions to the glorification of theatricalism, in the methods by which he obtained his results he does denominate "Father David" a tyrant and a faker, who himself, was always "acting." It is not improbable that the article's pointed references and daring statements will precipitate a lively controversy wherever Belasco's works were known.

The Capital After Dark.

Washington's after-dark spots are coming to life with a vengeance as the days grow shorter and the season really gets under way.

With special music and colorful costumes to add to the effectiveness of their numbers, the Cansinos, Antonio and Catalina, are playing a limited engagement at the new Heigh-Ho Club. The Cansinos, famous in the theater, are carrying out the traditions of an old Spanish family that have been dancers for generations. Naturally, Spanish numbers predominate in their programs.

At the Shoreham, elaborate floor shows are being presented four nights a week, Wednesday to Saturday, inclusive. These colorful productions are brought down from New York at what was at first feared would be almost prohibitive cost. They have "caught on" so quickly and so thoroughly, however, that the policy will be continued indefinitely—as long as the present capacity crowds continue, to be precise about it.

With Brusiloff conducting the dance orchestra and directing the floor show, the Madrillon got off to a flying start last week.

"Bowery Night."

Tonight at Walter Von Herbulis' Club Michel, "Bowery Night" will be celebrated in the grand manner. In compliment to the bill current at Loew's Palace Theater, and partly because it affords an unexampled excuse for that sort of thing, the Club Michel will present a pair of guest tickets to "The Bowery" to every couple attending tonight's soiree in costume characteristic of the Bowery in New York in the "gay '90s."

In addition to that, a free bar will be operated at which no limit will be placed upon the consumption of a local brew of high repute without cost to the "customer." Many other novelties are promised by the management and a pretty swell time should be had by all!

Two interesting attractions have been lined up for Hallowe'en week at Loew's Fox and Palace Theaters. At the former, Jack Pearl and Jimmy Durante will occupy the screen in "Meet the Baron," with Ted Lewis and His Jubilee Show holding forth on the stage: at the Palace, "Broadway Through a Keyhole" will be the screen feature.

Katharine Cornell, who is spending her holiday in the Bavarian Alps, will sail from Bremen, Germany, on the steamship Europa on October 21 for New York to begin rehearsals of "Romeo and Juliet," "Candida" and "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," which she will present this winter.

A. P. Kaye has been engaged to act Montague in the Shakespearean tragedy, Candida's father in the Shaw play, and Dr. Ford-Waterlow in the Besier romance. Kaye has appeared in several Shakespearean roles, and was seen with Robert Loraine in Shaw's "Man and Superman," and in the Theater Guild's productions of Shaw's "Back to Methuselah" and "Major Barbara." He was with Miss Cornell in "The Green Hat."

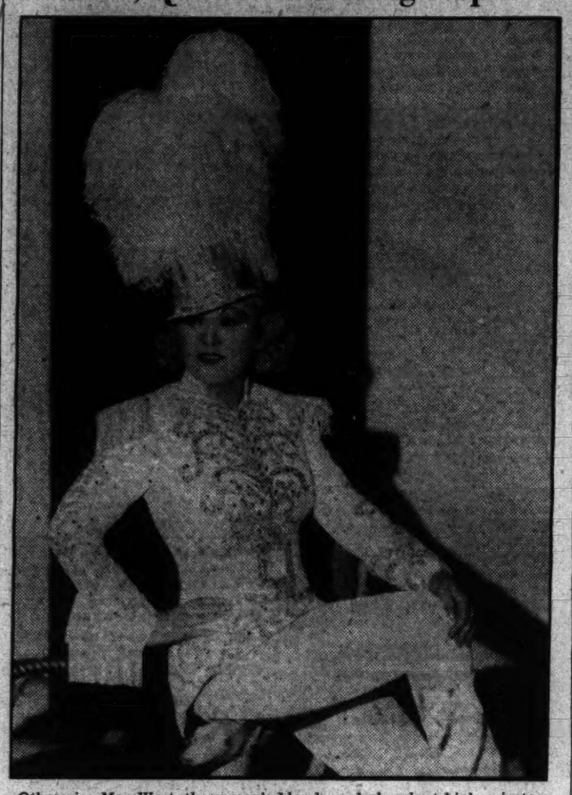

David Glassford, who acted with Miss Cornell in "Casanova" and in Guthrie McClintic's production of Edgar Wallace's "Criminal at Large," will play Dr. Chambers in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" and Capulet in "Romeo and Juliet."

It is expected that on October 23, Tallulah Bankhead, who was forced to withdraw from rehearsals of Owen Davis' new play, "Jezebel," on August 26 because of serious illness—and it is said that no one quite realizes how serious it was—will be able to resume preparations for her appearance in Guthrie McClintic's production of this drama of the South. In this event, she will open her New York season in the Martin Beck Theater on October 30.

The coming of plays like "Joan of Arc," "The Private Life of Henry VIII," "Mary of Scotland" and others of their ilk suggests that the theatrical gourmet has his season, like everybody else.

Yes, hot stakes, cold chops and the like!

Tira, Queen of the Big Tops!

Otherwise Mae West, the screen's blonde and abundant high priestess of the fleshpots, in the beplumed and gold-braided trappings she wears as the lion tamer in "I'm No Angel," the sensuous sequel to "She Done Him Wrong," which will follow "The Bowery" at Loew's Palace Theater—presumably this Thursday midnight.

Gayety

"TANGO QUEENS." Jimmie Lake presents a new burlesque, starring Tangara, supported by Hap Freyer, Boots Rush, Lew Petel, Darlin' Lucky, Charley La Vine, Danny Jacobs, Aline Dale, Joy St. Clair, Nora Murray, and the Grey Brothers. Reviewed Sunday night.

To concoct in words a better definition of dance and beauty than Jimmie Lake expresses in song and dance this week would be an almost hopeless task. For in this melange of gayety and fun there remains nothing that could be added, so completely has the good doctor-professor-colonel anticipated the thoughts conjured up by this fanciful title—"Tango Queens."

The queeniest of the queens is Tangara. As a singer she isn't so hot, but as a dancer—well, if the maestro does not have to resurface his stage next week it won't be La Belle Tangy's fault! And that black velvet gown in which she does her first specialty is a wow that adds not a little to the increasing of blood pressure and temperature.

Assisting, and in their own dance specialties, are Joy St. Clair, whose numbers are scarcely less torrid than Tangara's, and Darlin' Lucky, who has been promoted to a position of greater prominence in the troupe.

Hap Freyer bears the brunt of the comedy which this week seems to hit a new high in spontaniety.

Special mention should be made of the Moon Ballet and the Gypsy routines of the chorus. The latter is largely done to Victor Herbert's "Naughty Marietta" tunes, and it would not be surprising if the composer's shade was pondering whether the great master had overlooked something in the original operetta.

The Grey Brothers spring a novelty "radio" song and dance routine that is better than average, while the rest of the principals cavort in a fashion dangerously close to inspired.

Unfortunately, Charley La Vine was in poor voice due to something bordering on laryngitis. However, he renders, through a mike, "Brother, Can You Spare a Dime" and "Lazy Bones" to well-merited applause.

First Concert Of Symphony Proves Treat

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Showing evidence of the keen musical appetite which follows an enforced summer fast, an enthusiastic audience welcomed Dr. Hans Kindler and the National Symphony Orchestra at the first concert of the season yesterday afternoon in Constitution Hall. The hunger was appeased with a well-balanced program in which the solid fare of Bach and Beethoven was topped off with a piquant dessert of Rimski-Korsakov, and the quality of the applause left no doubt as to the satisfaction experienced.

When one says Bach without qualification, one means, of course, none other of that large family than the incomparable Johann Sebastian himself, whose contrapuntal complexities rest upon the utter simplicity of truth. It was the greater of his two preludes and Fugues in C minor for organ which the program offered in a transcription by Edgar T. Paul, Baltimore.

It is a noble work in which Bach gave eloquent voice to his yearning and his faith—yearning to utter the ineffable things heard with the ears of the spirit, and faith in the ultimate goodness of the cosmic plan. Mr. Paul has scored it deftly, with a discriminating use of the tone-color palette. Only at the triumphal close did one feel that the glare was too insistent as a representation of the organ's full thunder.

From Beethoven Shelf.

From the Beethoven shelf Dr. Kindler selected the E-flat major ("Emperor") concerto for piano, and from among the available pianists he chose Ernest Hutcheson as interpreter of the solo part. The choice was in both instances a wise one. The concerto is one of Beethoven's loveliest works, from the standpoint of poetic beauty, and while there are more superficially brilliant pianists than Ernest Hutcheson, none is more sincerely a lyric poet at the keyboard. His facile and fluent technique serves him well in the clear exposition of themes and his singing tone is based on fine shades of touch. His reading was persuasive and suffused with emotional fervor.

Little of the introspective and tragic Beethoven is to be found in this concerto, which abounds in vitality, lyrical, soliloquizing and good humor. Its driving energy is unremitting, even in the tenderness of the second movement, and it has the momentum of an idea conceived and carried out without a pause. That was the mood in which it was played and conducted, soloist and director working together in excellent rapport.

After the intermission came Rimski-Korsakov's series of tone-pictures from "The Thousand and One Nights," familiar to us all as the "Scheherazade" suite. It would greatly simplify matters if we were to discard on our programs the French spelling of the name, and adopt in its place the more accurate "Shahrazad" that Burton used in his translation. But, however the title is spelled and wherever the work is heard, it exerts the same glamorous spell with its evocation of Oriental atmosphere.

Masterpiece of Color.

It is a masterpiece of its kind, a superb piece of pageantry, glowing with rich colors. Skilled orchestrator that he was, Rimski-Korsakov utilized in weaving these tapestries every trick of instrumentation at his command, and the result is sheer wizardry. What meaning the music has is merely its sensuous imagery, quite divorced from an aesthetic significance.

Entering upon its third season, the National Symphony Orchestra has reached the stage when its integrity as an organization is becoming definite and pronounced. Every orchestra has to pass through the awkward age, a trying period for itself and those who have its welfare at heart.

An orchestra is an organism in which the individual players take the roles of the parts which make up the whole. Until smooth coordination is established between the parts, the movements of the entire body are apt to be shambling. And in the case of the orchestra, the problem of adjustment is further complicated by the fact that the mind, the directing center of control, is outside and detached from it. The conductor has at first to make his will effective upon members unaccustomed to that authority.

Unity Established.

Dr. Kindler has wrought hard at this task of establishing unity, and his efforts are now apparent. His endeavors have not been solitary, for the orchestra could not have reached its present unity without the loyal cooperation of his men. It is not yet a perfected orchestra, but perfect orchestras are few. There are minor flaws to be detected here and there, in attack, in intonation and in esprit de corps, but these flaws are surprisingly sparse in so young an organization.

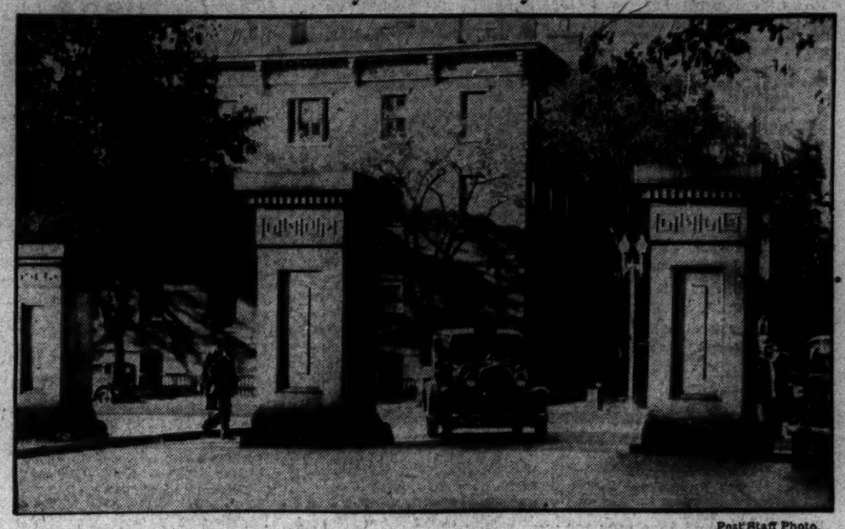

Dr. Kindler's musicianship is unquestioned, and he conducts with conviction. It is a pleasure for a newcomer to note what he has already accomplished. With time, and with the support of the public, as well as with the loyalty of his players, he will build an orchestra of which Washington will be able to boast.

French See Business Hope But Trim Sail

Tax Returns Drop, Trade Improves as Nation Sticks to Gold.

Paris, Oct. 15 (AP).—France and western Europe see hope on the economic horizon, but their statesmen are taking no chances. They are grimly trimming budgets and fighting for their finances and peace.

Premier Edouard Daladier visualized Europe's worries when he bade France accept a rigorous overhauling and avoid money tinkering "which will lead to the ruin of the regime and the country."

Daladier warned Parliament it must put France's house in order—or find another government.

While America's NRA is skeptically criticized by French economists, prices, nevertheless, are advancing in France, and government figures show a business upturn roughly in tune with the Roosevelt program.

Tax Returns Decline.

Considering 1913 as an economic unit of 100, industrial production now registers 112, as compared with 96 a year ago.

Metallurgy is 90, against 72 a year ago. Textiles are 77, against 60; steel is up one-third; automobiles and many other lines are progressing.

Yet tax returns for the last eight months are about 5 per cent below estimates. The business turnover tax is down similarly. Foreign trade has steadily diminished to a level of about half that of 1930.

The first eight months of 1933 showed a slight drop in imports, but a 9 per cent decrease in exports.

Faced with this spotty economic picture, Premier Daladier declared the budget must be balanced or there would be a change in cabinets. He said the only safety of the franc lay in rigid economy.

While France is more in the limelight, Switzerland is facing a similar situation—a budget deficit, unemployment, and loss of trade. Vigorous measures are being taken to retrench.

Switzerland recently prohibited building of any new department or chain stores or enlargement of present ones.

The Swiss minister of finance has said he is determined to put the Swiss house in order. The country is against inflation of the Swiss franc.

Expect to Sell U. S. Wine.

Quotas and trade restrictions cut the unfavorable balance of Swiss trade during the first semester by 100,000,000 francs. The budget deficit is 90,000,000 francs (currently about $25,000,000). But the government has a balancing plan calling for emergency taxes and salary reductions.

The prospective end of prohibition in America is cheering to France as it is to Spain, Portugal and Italy. Before the war the wine trade from these countries amounted to only a few million dollars annually, but it now is expected to be greater.

France's gold bloc with Belgium, Holland, Switzerland, Poland and Italy is tying her closer to these countries. Minister of Commerce Louis Serre has said he hopes this currency cooperation will be paralleled by economic arrangements strengthening western Europe.

Meanwhile these gold countries are bracing themselves for the strain expected when the United States and Britain stabilize their monetary units. They recognize it may be disastrous if public troubles become troubles, and the governments are trying by quotas, trade agreements, financing and supervision to restore economic health.

Code to Limit Looms Urged

Women's Bureau Ends Its Probe of "Stretch-Out" Mill System.

An inquiry into the practicability of limiting the "stretch-out" system by law, made by the Women's Bureau of the Labor Department at the request of the legislature of South Carolina, resulted yesterday in a finding that such limitation would prove "very difficult."

The Women's Bureau report recommended, however, that a code might be drawn up by experienced textile engineers that would set the proper standard of looms per weaver.

Complaints of abuses in the "stretch-out" system, the Women's Bureau said, had intensified in recent months under the NRA program. The workers complaining charged that employers gave the wage and hour scale demanded, but intensified the task by an efficiency system which gave weavers more looms.

Wide Revision Of High School Courses Urged

Trained Leaders Are Also Urged in Federal Survey Report.

More trained leadership is needed in American high schools, says a report of a national survey of secondary education, "Procedures in Curriculum Making," just published by the Office of Education, Interior Department. A revision of all courses of study in high schools is needed, especially in the smaller institutions, says the report.

Prepared by Edwin S. Lide, school curriculum specialist, the survey is one of 28 now being prepared. The booklet explains the lack of revision in curriculum has been due to insufficient time and lack of funds to provide persons trained to carry out the work.

The county-wide revision type was found best exemplified in Maryland, where revision has the assistance of a State supervisor. Authority is highly centralized in the State Department of Education.

State-wide revision methods are found in approximately a third of the States, with considerable variance in effectiveness. It is pointed out that the State program, compared with city programs, reveal less teacher training preliminary to revision, less research in building the curriculum, less try out before adoption, less appraisal and less continuous revision.

Forest Camp Recruits Start Work Tuesday

Half of Replacements for Second Period Are Enlisted.

Baltimore, Oct. 15 (AP).—The transfer of new replacements from concentration centers to Civilian Conservation Corps forestry companies in the Third Corps Area will begin Tuesday, area headquarters announced today.

Approximately half of the replacements required to fill vacancies in the companies have been enlisted for the second six-month period, it was stated.

The three conditioning camps at Fort George G. Meade, Md., Fort Humphreys, Va., and Carlisle Barracks, Pa., now house 5,162 juniors and war veterans, the announcement stated. As these men are sent out to the forestry camps, new men will be brought in for their preliminary training until 12,000 men have been recruited to fill the vacancies in the area.

Headquarters has issued a special call to the Army recruiting sergeants who are enrolling the C. C. C., men, asking for 142 experienced cooks to replace the regular Army cooks now serving the 33 companies which are being brought into the area from the far West.

New Budget Gets Backing Of Taxpayers

Believes a $3,000,000 Jump From Douglas Total Necessary.

Support of organized citizens for the $40,000,000 District budget submitted by the Commissioners appeared likely last night.

Whether the estimates, exceeding by nearly $3,000,000 the maximum set by Budget Director Lewis L. Douglas, will get by the director, remains up to him. Douglas was out of town yesterday.

Basis of Estimates.

Basing their increases on analysis of the director's instructions, the Commissioners exceeded the $36,710,000 maximum set by Douglas by practically $3,000,000. Their estimates, expanded by allowances for restored salaries, gasoline tax anticipation, water rent anticipations and unexpended Municipal Center appropriations, totaled $39,710,000.

"Viewing the subject from the knowledge of the difficulties facing the Commissioners, I am very well pleased with what was submitted," Yaden said. "It looks to me as though all expenditures listed are necessary.

"Because of the difficulties facing the budget, I approve the expenditures in excess of what the Budget Director suggested as a maximum. Of course, I can not say that I approve each item, but in general, I am in accord with the estimates."

Yaden's approval was believed indicative of the attitude of the actively organized citizens.

Continues $1.50 Tax Rate.

Revenue estimates for the forthcoming year were based on continuance of the present $1.50 tax rate, with allowances made for another substantial reduction in assessed valuation in the District. Estimated assessed valuation for 1935 is placed at $1,100,000,000 or $50,000,000 under the 1934 valuation.

Relief will play a big role in the new budget, $6,775,824 being set aside for that purpose, with relief grants from the Federal Government not included.

Renewal of the fight in Congress for adequate Federal expenditures for the District was forecast. Although $9,500,000 was allowed by Congress for District needs in 1931 and 1932, only $5,700,000 was authorized for 1934. In drawing up their budget, the Commissioners used this figure as a base, but anticipated going to Congress for a final and adequate settlement.

Crowds Visiting 1933 Model Home

Garrison Street Dwelling Remains Open to 9 P.M.

Crowds of persons are being delighted daily by visits to the 1933 furnished model home at 3412 Garrison street northwest. It is one of a popular group, two of which were sold last week. But two of the offering remain for speedy acquisition.

The display house of the group, presented by Levin P. Handy, is furnished by Hutchison's, Inc., and the draperies are by John F. Ligon. The Dupont washable Tontine shades are by the Shade Shop.

The model home may be viewed by driving out Connecticut avenue to Fessenden street, then turning right one square to Thirty-fourth street and north one short square to Garrison street. The sample house is open each day until 9 o'clock in the evening.

Burglary Charged In Chicken Theft

A charge of stealing a chicken from the store of Manuel Pevenstein, 709 Four-and-one-half street southwest, yesterday took Edward Richardson, colored, 33, 428 I street southwest, to jail on a charge of housebreaking.

Richardson shattered Pevenstein's show window with a brick and snatched the fowl, police were told. Richardson was arrested by Policeman R. J. Tompkins, Precinct Four. The chicken was recovered.

Calf Rope

Police Ride Washington Range for "Josie."

"Josie" is a calf. Simpson missed her from his barn.

Policeman E. T. Wessells, of the Eighth Precinct, pitted his experience (if any) as a rider of the Western plains against the rustlers (if any).

He found "Josie" tied to a tree in a wooded section near Georgia avenue and Rittenhouse street northwest. She was returned.

Little Red Schoolhouse With "New Deal" Innovations

Draws Many Pupils From Maryland Homes Near the District.

There are little red school houses—lots of them. The kind where children took turns minding the base burner and chasing stray cows off the lot, and the kind that has electric clocks and vanishing cloak rooms.

Kenilworth School, its new one-story structure hugging a site at Forty-fourth and Ord streets northeast, follows the latter pattern. Still it has many features of the old-fashioned country schoolhouse, and the result is a paradox, probably unmatched in Washington.

The Capital's newest grade school is located in a secluded spot, which not long ago was overrun by weeds and brush. It is a short walk from the Eastern Branch and the weakened bridge which wrecked a train last month.

A large number of the 124 pupils, first to sixth graders, are sent here from rural homes in nearby Maryland. All around is that backwoods atmosphere, even though the view across the river yields signs of commerce and industry.

Blackboards "Step Aside."

Inside Kenilworth School the illusion is shattered. Indeed, it is not necessary to enter to note the contrast. A smartly kept lawn surrounds the building. From the new flagpole flies a new American flag. School begins, but there is no "schoolmarm" waving a bell on the steps. Her place has been taken by electric current, which issues a mechanical summons.

Among the interior features are the cloakroom, blackboards, teachers' room, kindergarten department and the last word in classroom equipment.

The blackboards are sliding panels, offering ingress to the cloakrooms. When the cloakrooms are not in use, the slate board presents a solid front. Comes time to go home and presto! A knob is pressed, the blackboard swings aside and there is the cloakroom.

Long Fight Gets Results.

The Parent-Teachers Association, headed by Mrs. Mabel Hubbell, Mrs. Alma Hudson and other officers and members, fought ten years to get a teachers' room when they may rest, read, study and cook. When Kenilworth opened September 18, they were rewarded.

Across the corridor is the kindergarten department, which is being used for games and rhythm classes until the community produces enough 5-year-olds to organize a class.

The last two years the school was housed in three portables, hot in summer and cold in winter. Before that, Kenilworth school was an old building, which fell into decay and was abandoned.

Of this new school, a sport model institution in ancient surroundings, Miss Elizabeth Emmons, principal, is very proud.

Dr. Cartwright preached at the service broadcast from the church yesterday. He was assisted by the Rev. S. A. Czyz. The music, under direction of Harry Wheaton Howard, included Miss Florence Yocum, Soprano; Miss Kathryn Bowers, contralto; Miss Ann Arlen, violinist, and the Boys' Sanctuary Choir.

Pharmacists Delay Meeting, Await Survey

District Society to Take Up Work Conditions Friday Night.

The meeting of the Pharmacist Society of the District of Columbia scheduled for tonight has been postponed until Friday evening. It will be held at the Y. M. C. A. at 11:30 p. m.

Marion S. Alley, president of the society, said the delay was made so that the data of the survey being made of the working conditions of pharmacists of the District may be completed and presented to the society.

Resolutions of protest against the proposed drug code were adopted at the last meeting and forwarded by telegram to Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, administrator of the NRA. The resolutions called for a 48-hour week with a $50 weekly compensation, time and a half for overtime, and the inclusion of registered pharmacists for benefits of the NRA.

The District Board of Pharmacy has been petitioned to issue notices to every person operating a drug store here that "a registered pharmacist must be in charge of pharmacies at all hours the stores are open." The society contends there are a number of stores that are evading this particular phase of the pharmacy law and that unfair advantage is being taken of those stores which are operating in compliance with the law and that this is keeping registered pharmacists out of positions.

589 Concerns Asked to Help In Chest Drive

Letters Ask Selection of Keymen to Collect From Workers.

Business men were urged yesterday to assist the Community Chest campaign to be held November 20 to 29, letters signed by Frank J. Hogan, campaign chairman and Walter B. Clarkson, chairman of the group solicitation unit.

The letters were mailed to 589 business firms in Washington, employing 20 or more persons, who are visited each year by the group solicitation unit in behalf of more than 60 welfare institutions.

The letter pointed out that the institutions assisted invalids the homeless and blind persons and needy children.

"Much of the support given by private contribution has had to be diverted to the pressing need of feeding the unemployed," the letter added. "These welfare institutions are in a serious financial situation.

"Our task now is to give back to these institutions the sorely needed support so that they can more completely meet the pressing demands being placed upon them. They can carry on only with the help which the business establishments of the city and their employes have so generously given in the past.

"As in previous years, we are asking that a keyman be designated in each business to be responsible for soliciting subscriptions of employes; and we urge the executive, wherever possible, to act as keyman.

Catholic U. 'Frosh' Trounce 'Sophs' in Class Tug-of-War

Win Water Fight, Turn Hose on Spectators in Jollification.

It was freshman day at Catholic University yesterday—and they took full advantage of it.

All traditions were shattered when the 'yearlings' routed Sophomores in the interclass tug-of-war and water fight. So enthusiastic were they in victory that spectators and opponents alike suffered at the wrong end of a fire hose.

The Sophomores were unwillingly dragged from one end of Brookland Stadium to the other. With victory assured, the Freshmen grabbed the hose and turned a powerful stream of water on everyone within range.

They then formed a procession and decided to shatter a few more traditions. A cheer for the class of 1937 echoed through sacred Sophomore halls. And to top things off, the frosh walked right up the steps of McMahon Hall, forbidden to them by every known rule, and sang their class song.

Pike Tribute Opens Mason Session Here

John H. Cowles Presides Charles L. Buck, Jr., Is Speaker.

Tribute as a poet and philosopher was paid Albert Pike yesterday at memorial services, which began a week of activity in Washington for the Supreme Council, Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite of the Southern Jurisdiction, U. S. A.

Charles F. Buck, jr., youngest member in point of service of the Supreme Council, delivered the memorial address, a biennial event honoring Gen. Pike, who served as commander from 1851 to 1891.

Characterizing Gen. Pike as a lover of nature, Mr. Buck quoted several of his poems.

"Those who saw him, and those who have heard of him in his Washington home—his office in harmonious disorder, surrounded by his hundreds of birds, doing his work amid the din of their carols and songs, and chattering discords—will never forget the scene nor the impression which it produced," he said.

Following the service a wreath was laid on Gen. Pike's tomb in Oakhill Cemetery.

The sessions will begin at 9 a. m. today with registration. The Supreme Council will convene at 10 a. m. for an all-day meeting.

Reserve Officers Club Will See Films of War

Members of the Montgomery County Chapter, Reserve Officers Association of the United States, Friday night will have an opportunity to see themselves as others saw them.

Motion pictures of the world war will be shown by the Signal Corps at a club meeting at 8 p. m. in the Bethesda County Building, Lieut. Col. Heber H. Rice, secretary treasurer, announces.

Law Librarians To Hear Local Girl

Miss Helen Newman Will Speak in Chicago.

Miss Helen Newman, George Washington University Law Librarian, will read a paper today before the American Association of Law Libraries at its twenty-eighth annual conference in Chicago.

Her subject will be: "William Cranch, Judge, Law School Professor, Reporter." Judge Cranch and William Thomas Carroll, clerk of the United States Supreme Court from 1827 to 1863, were the first professors of law at the university here.

Miss Newman is one of the few women law librarians in the country, and among the youngest. She was graduated from George Washington University Law School in 1923, and two years later secured the master of laws degree. She is a member of the District bar.

Petition Asks U. S. to Buy Land in City

Plea, Now Being Signed, Will Be Laid Before Roosevelt.

Purchase by the Government of all property in Southwest Washington set aside under the public buildings act will be asked of President Roosevelt by residents of the section in a petition to be sponsored by The Washington Board of Trade and signed so far by more than 300 persons.

"Congress practically effected a cloud on the titles to the properties, which has made it difficult to sell or rent them or to renew mortgages," the petition contended.

Run-down neighborhoods, it was asserted, lie adjacent to the Capitol, the House Office Building, the Botanical Gardens and the new public buildings erected or now under construction along Pennsylvania avenue.

Residents asserted that properties purchased by the Government are being rented at a much lower rate than the residents can afford to accept for their own holdings. They declare they are willing to sell the properties at a reasonable price.

Purchase of the properties by the Government was authorized under the Keyes-Elliott bill. The land embraces an area between Delaware avenue and Four-and-a-half street, west to Fourteenth street and north of Maryland avenue and Virginia avenue to the present Government purchases on Pennsylvania avenue.

Pitt Gains Top Ranking in East; Ohio State and Michigan in Midwest

This Morning

With Shirley L. Povich.

Monday Morning Quarter Back

WHEN Indiana took that two-point lead over Notre Dame in the first quarter on a safety scored by a lad named Shakespeare, there was, at least, some consolation for the Irish. It wouldn't happen again, 'cause Shakespeare never repeats.

Navy's Notre Dame system couldn't compete with the best of all systems as exemplified by Pitt—the human system. The big Panthers found themselves opposed by an entirely new and fresh Navy eleven in the fourth quarter and by that time were so tired and ragged that they could only drag themselves 77 yards to a touchdown, with no interruptions.

It was an off day for George Washington U., but the Colonials took a beating just the same. Auburn and Tennessee, the two major attractions of G. W. here this season, both were bumped off Saturday and the George Washington athletic association exchequer felt both blows.

With Virginia holding Columbia to a 15-6 score, and Washington and Lee holding Yale to 14-0, the Old Dominion finds balm in a pair of moral victories. But they would trade 'em any day for a couple of touchdowns at the proper time.

Missouri on Saturday qualified for the same class with the Eighteenth Amendment. Thirty-three to 0 was the score by which it lost to Kansas. Another field goal by Kansas would have repealed Missouri.

The names of Siegal and Smith, one as common as the other in the nomenclature of New York, were the names of the goats at the end of the first half of New York University's game with Lafayette. Both had fumbled for N. Y. U. on the brink of touchdowns. In the second half they came back to score all the points for the Violets' in their 13-12 victory.

The most notorious man in Tennessee is Wallace Wade, Duke coach. In 1930, Wade's Alebama team beat Tennessee, and for three years no other team had been able to beat the Volunteers. On Saturday Wade's team from Duke engineered the same trick. And Tennessee is Wading up to its neck in grief.

The moral of two of Saturday's most outstanding struggles seems to be: Avoid old-time entanglements. Navy resumed relations with Pitt after 17 years and took a 34-6 beating. Cornell resumed relations with Michigan after 16 years and took a 40-0 beating. So there you are.

If you play hunches, Ohio State is a good bet to beat Michigan next Saturday. Vanderbilt, using the Michigan system, lost to the Buckeyes, 20 to 0. Coach McGuigan, of Vanderbilt, and Coach Yost, of Michigan, are brothers-in-law. If that means anything, it's all right with me.

West Vriginia had its troubles getting around left end against Fordham with Ludwinowicz playing the position for the Rams. West Virginia half backs were being run out of bounds in an effor to sidestep the alphabet.

Besides Ludwinowicz, Fordham's candidates for All-American honors are the following lads of fine, old Puritan stock: Nitka, end; Danowski and Maniaci, half backs, and Sarausky, full backs.

Rutgers scored one of those moral victories over Colgate, although it is concealed in a 25-2 defeat. Scoring a safety after blocking a punt in the last quarter, Rutgers made the only points yielded by Colgate since the 1931 season. I propose a Tournament of Roses game for the moral victors.

There is balm for American University and V. M. I. They are in the same class with Northwestern. None of'em has scored a point thus far this season.

Duke Now Favored For Championship

Richmond, Va., Oct. 15 (AP).—Southern Conference football was holding its head up today, and down at Durham, Wallace Wade and his Blue Devils were receiving the well-earned plaudits that came with a magnificent 10-to-2 decision over Tennessee.

Duke's triumph widened the horizon for the fighting Blue Devils, who, favored now to win the Southern Conference title, were listening to suggestions that they might be able to claim the mythical All-Dixie championship at the end of the season.

Danowski Leading List With 38 Points

New York, Oct. 15 (AP).—Ed Danowski, battering half back of the undefeated Fordham Rams, led the scoring stars of the Eastern football fields today, halfway through October. Danowski, with 38 points to his credit, was eight points ahead of his nearest rival, "Chief" Myers, of Bucknell.

The Fordham ace also led the section in touchdowns, making two in each of his three games, and tossed in a couple of extra points for good measure. Myers was credited with five touchdowns.

Auburn Game High Spot For G. W.

Colonials to Meet 1932 Champs of Dixie Here on Saturday.

C. U. to Play Chattanooga; Md. Host to V. M. I. Eleven.

GEORGE WASHINGTON'S football buildup reaches a new peak Saturday when Auburn invades the Capital for its premier showing. The Southerners, cotitleholders with Tennessee and Louisiana State, will bring on a veteran eleven, including Firpo Phipps, acknowledged to be one of the South's most brilliant backs. Another Auburn star is Dave Ariail, end, who was named all-Southern and received many all-America mentions last season.

Chattanooga, the Friday night foe of Catholic U., is being heralded as having one of the greatest teams in the history of the school, and it sounded a warning to C. U. when it came from behind on Saturday to trim Oglethorpe, conquerors of Manhattan. The Little Dixie Conference champions will meet Dutch Bergman's Flying Cardinals under the lights at Griffith Stadium.

G. U. vs. Terrors.

Georgetown stacks up against its old rival Western Maryland at Baltimore Saturday afternoon. To date the Green Terrors' record has been far from impressive, but it is against the Hoyas that the Harlow machine is at its best.

Maryland will entertain Virginia Military Academy at College Park Saturday in a Southern Conference tilt.

Only one serious casualty resulted in the maneuverings over the week-end in the George Washington camp. Demming, 220-pound regular Colonial tackle, reported Saturday morning with a ruptured blood vessel in his left arm, which will

Trojans Again Lead West Coast Group

Meet Oregon State in Next Conference Test.

San Francisco, Oct. 15 (AP).—The Trojan football juggernaut of Southern California keeps rolling along and 80,000 fans were pretty well convinced today only the greatest of upsets will prevent it from rolling to a second successive sectional championship, if not another mythical national title.

The country's largest football crowd of this season sat in yesterday at Los Angeles on the 14-to-7 victory over St. Mary's Gaels that brought Southern California its fifth win of 1933 and its twenty-fifth successive conquest since early in 1931.

Next week Southern California takes on Oregon State, which defeated University of San Francisco, 12 to 7, yesterday. California opens its conference season next Saturday against Washington State.

Oregon's stock as a contender for conference honors was boosted with its 6-to-0 win over Washington.

Central Choice Today Over Eastern

Grid Game Promises to Be Most Important of School Series.

THEY were rained out Friday, but they are rarin' to go today. Eastern and Central will fight it out in what promises to be the most important interhigh battle of the series, this afternoon in the Central Stadium at 3:30 o'clock.

Aside from being a District public high battle it takes on the flavor of an individual battle between two of the District's best high school full backs, Frank Kocsis, of Central, and Jack Keegin, of Eastern. Both lads can kick, carry the ball and pass, and are the individual spark plugs in their respective back fields.

Central Is Favorite.

Central, because of its four victories to date, is looked upon by followers of both schools as the favorite. The Capital Hill entry has defeated Alexandria, Charlottsville fives, Emerson and Gonzaga by impressive scores, while Eastern has won from Episcopal and Alexandria. Only the Alexandria game of both schools can give a comparative record on their relative strength. Central defeated the Virginians in its opener, 12-7; Eastern whipped them, 7-0

Burt Coggins of Central and Charley Guyon of Eastern probably will stand pat on their line-ups as announced Friday morning.

Harder Tests Face Title Seekers

Princeton and Columbia, Penn an d Dartmouth to Clash Saturday.

Georgia and Duke Rule in South; Trojans Lead on Coast Again.

OUT of the welter of battles on college gridirons thus far in the campaign six teams have planted themselves solidly in the running for sectional and national honors.

Pittsburgh in the East; Michigan and Ohio State in the Midwest; Georgia and Duke in the South, and southern California in the Far West have established themselves as dominant favorites.

Pitt, by its scuttling victory over the Navy, has the jump on the rival claimants to the top rung of the Eastern standing. The Panthers have met and defeated three major clubs to date by impressive scores, while Fordham, Princeton and Colgate have joustled minor elevens. But Fordham defeated West Virginia by only a point short of the 21-0 score that Pitt ran up against the Mountaineers.

Pitt Faces Minnesota.

Should the Panther emerge victor over Minnesota on Saturday its stock will boom even more. Fordham will have a tough battle on its hands when it stacks up against Boston College in its second major tussle of the year. Colgate, another strong bid for the Eastern title, should have little trouble with a defunct Lafayette eleven.

Princeton, as yet unscored on, can boost its prestige by winning Saturday over Columbia, whose showing against Virginia Saturday was anything but savory. The Tiger has been feasting on soft spots, and, although the scores were enormous, the opposition was weak.

Yale and Harvard will also hit grade-A foes Saturday, after tuning up on minor elevens, the Bulldog, far from impressive, due to the closeness of the scores. Yale battles Brown, Harvard meets Holy Cross. Dartmouth, as usual, looking good in early season settos, holds an edge over Pennsylvania, whose team started intercollegiate competition last Saturday with anything but a good showing against Franklin-Marshall. Navy returns to Southern competition elevens with Virginia probably offering a balance regainer after the Pitt rout.

Carnegie vs. Irish.

Carnegie Tech, with an impressive showing against Pop Warner's Temple team two weeks ago and then barely winning last week by a field goal over little Xavier, will find itself pitted against Notre Dame's Ramblers Saturday. The game offers a much stiffer battle

McCarthy and Cole Win Crowns in Golf Finals at Beaver Dam and Kenwood

John Miller and Dennell Defeated

Semifinals Are Reached in Woodmont Club Tournament.

Capt. and Mrs. Hickey Win Low Net Honors at Army-Navy.

TWO club championships were decided and a third reached the semifinal stage in yesterdays's activities on District golf fronts.

Martin F. McCarthy, former sandlot baseball star, realized a long-cherished ambition by defeating John R. Miller, 1932 champion, in the finals of the Deaver Dam Country Club tournament, 4 and 3.

At Kenwood Golf and Country Club, Charlie Cole scored a 1 up triumph over Bernard (Top) Dennell in a thrilling 36-hole battle.

Howard Nordlinger, six-time Woodmont Country Club champion, won his second round match handily to swing into the semifinals along with Byron Ackerman, Bill Illch and Mel Kraft.

Woodmont is the only District club yet to complete its championship. Miller B. Stevinson retained his Columbia laurels; Luther Steward, jr., regained his Congressional crown; Bill DiEste, cross-handed expert, continued his reign at Argyle; David L. Thomson triumphed at Manor; Reese R. Hair at Washington Golf and Country Club, and Craig McKee at Indian Spring.

McCarthy, in defeating Miller, the District "champion of champions," shot the 33 holes in only one over par. With a birdie 3 on the opening hole McCarthy assumed a lead which he never surrendered. He was 2 up at the tenth, and held the same margin at intermission, with a par 72 for the 18 to his credit. McCarthy's 72 set a new record for competitive match play rounds at Beaver Dam, and is only one stroke above his unofficial amateur course mark.

Adding to his lead, McCarthy became 4 up at the end of the twenty-seventh, after the two finalists had halved the last 11 holes. McCarthy played steadily throughout. He holed out a 175-yard number 4 iron shot for an eagle deuce on the 428-yard ninth.

R. M. Brown won the first flight consolation by defeating W. J. LaBille, 2 and 1.

Final Results in Flights.

Championship flight—Martin F. McCarthy defeated John R. Miller, 4 and 3.
Consolation—R. M. Brown defeated W. J. LaBille, 2 and 1.
Third flight—C. F. Range defeated G. C. Wortman, 4 and 3.
Sixth flight—F. A. Peterson defeated L. C. Winters, 2 up.

Cole won the Kenwood title with a typical storybook finish. He was 2 down to Dennell crossing the road of the forenoon battle, and was still down by the same margin at the end of 18 holes. Going to the twenty-seventh, Dennell's margin had been whittled to 1 up.

Dennell muffed his big opportunity on the twelfth water hole of the afternoon. Here he atttmpted to play safe after Cole was ditched on his second shot, and missed his third, winding up with a 6 to his rival's par 5. Cole then shot his par 5 on the long thirteenth to even the match, halved the fourteenth, fifteenth and sixteenth, and nabbed his 3 on the tricky seventeenth to win the hole and take the lead for the first time during the match. They halved the eighteenth.

L. G. Hutton whipped E. E. Riley 1 up, to win the second flight, and J. L. Brown beat T. D. Dutton, 1 up, in 21 holes in the third flight.

In the seniors' championship, S. Smith entered the semifinals by defeating E. Tew, 6 and 5. He will play S. S. Bond for the title next Saturday.

There was only one close match in the quarter-finals at Woodmont. Illch was carried to the eighteenth green before winning from Willard Goldheim, 1 up. Defending champion Nordlinger walloped Bob Baum, 7 and 6; Ackerman beat Stanley Glaser, 6 and 5, and Kraft put away Bill Slepian, 5 and 4.

Capt. and Mrs. D. O. Hickey, with 178—16—162, won first low net prize in the mixed foursome at Army and Navy Country Club yesterday. Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Rogers, tied with Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Levy at 163, won in the draw for second low net. Low gross prize went to Maj. and Mrs. E. A. Noyes, with 164.

Mrs. David Clarke shot a 37, 1 over par for the first nine at Army and Navy, but faltered on the stretch, taking a 47 for an 84. She was playing with her husband.

M. S. Brown, holing out a 150-yard mashie shot, scored an eagle 3 on the 468-yard fifteenth.

J. W. Harvey, jr., and Mel Shorey defeated Al Treder and Hary Pitt, 3 and 2, at Manor yetserday.

Mrs. E. B. Wagner, with 107—16—91, took the lead in the battle for the Wineman Cup that began yesterday at Indian Spring. Women golfers will turn in scores during the remainder of October.

Although he shot nine straight pars for a 36 on the first nine, George Diffenbaugh found himself 3 down to the combination of Tom Moore and Arthur Urban yesterday at Indian Spring. Birdies beat the little pro's pars, although neither Moore or Urban scored as well as Diffenbaugh.

Close to 15 teams are expected to compete this afternoon, starting at 1:30, in the Middle Atlantic P. G. A. pro-amateur sweepstakes at Manor.

Several District golfers were in the gallery that followed Denny Shute, British Open champion, and Big Ed Dudley, Pennsylvania pro, both Ryder Cup stars, in their 18-hole exhibition match at Woodholme yesterday with Glenn Spencer, Maryland Country Club, and Warner Mather, of the host club.

Shute and Dudley lost, 2 and 1. They will compete in the National Capital Open on November 11-12, at Kenwood.

Howard Loss Seen Inflaming Strike

Student Council Likely to Enter Dispute.

Loss of its initial game to St. Paul Saturday by Howard University was described last night by members of the student council as a spark calculated to inflame the players' strike situation, which flared up last Tuesday when the squad failed to report for practice and held a protest meeting in Clark Hall against conditions.

Additional steps were postponed then until today, representations being made, meanwhile, to university officials, of the squad's objection to inferior football equipment. Desire for a training table also has been voiced by the squad, emphasis being placed upon supervision of diet.

The fact that several of last year's gridiron aggregation at Howard were not found in the line-up against St. Paul, including "Showboat" Ware, has been calculated to bring the student council into the matter, as the student body wants Ware on the gridiron. The university administration is understood not to favor a training table at university expense.

Pittsburgh Tops Eastern Rankings

The Ohio State-Michigan fracas at Ann Arbor figures to determine the Big Ten champion for 1933. Both clubs defeated major foes Saturday, the Buckeyes soundly trouncing Vanderbilt and the Wolverines humiliating Cornell. Two weeks ago, the Buckeyes swamped Virginia, 75-0, while Kipke's eleven defeated the powerful Michigan State outfit, 20-6. It's the red letter day of the Western Conference for crowds, gate receipts and football.

Army meets Illinois in Cleveland, with the Zuppke eleven sporting an undefeated record to date and holding a great win over Wisconsin. The Soldiers stack up against their first major opponent of the year under the new coaching regime.

Purdue Fears Chicago.

Northwestern, which tied the Stanford Indians in what was termed a mild surprise last week, will find tough sledding against Indiana, while Iowa, victor over Northwestern, clashes with Wisconsin. Purdue fears Chicago after its tie with Minnesota. Nebraska and Kansas State, both undefeated against fair to middlin' opposition, lock horns in the Big Six feature of the Midwest, while Kansas, surpriser of Notre Dame, meets a Tartar in Tulsa.

Duke, by its fine victory over Tennessee, established itself in a class with Georgia. The Crackers hold the edge, however, as they have vanquished Tulane, North Carolina and Carolina State; the Blue Devils have been fattening their average on minor opponents.

Alabama and Tennessee, considered the strongest Southern clubs before the season started, can atone for their poor showing earlier in the season by slugging each other into submission Saturday.

Southern California again has everything its own way out on the Coast. Saturday the Trojans managed to whip St. Mary's. Stanford's tie with Northwestern drops the Indians a few notches behind Howard Jones' team for this season. "All is quiet along the Western Coast" this Saturday, leaving the major football interest strictly to the East and Midwest.

Two Colgate Tackles Unable to Face N. Y. U.

Hamilton, N. Y., Oct. 15.—Warren Davis and Jim O'Hara, two of Colgate's best tackles, will not be able to play against New York University this week-end, it was determined today.

Davis has a dislocated elbow and O'Hara a severe knee sprain. Dr. L. C. Beebe, university physician, said they would not be able to play for at least two weeks.

5,000 Watch Stanton Nine Win Flag

Defeat Millers, 4-3, 5-0; Davidson and Lanahan Hurl for Victors.

THE Stanton Cleaners climaxed the Capital City League season with a smashing double triumph over the Miller Furniture Co. nine in the championship playoff yesterday on the South Ellipse, winning the first game, 4 to 3, and the nightcap, 5 to 0.

The season's largest crowd, variously estimated at between 5,000 and 6,000, watched the hard-hitting Stanton nine capture the championship for the first time. Miller had annexed the first-half honors by defeating Stanton by a one-game margin, while the new champions had to trim the Griffith Blue Coals to clinch the second half.

Ray Davidson Winner.

The first game proved the most exciting of the double-header, with Ray Davidson, diminutive southpaw, going the route for the victors, yielding nine hits, the same amount made by the Stanton. Harry Milburn, right-hander, was the losing hurler. Both Milburn and Davidson are former University of Maryland pitching teammates.

Miller assumed the lead in the first inning, Wheeler scoring, but Stanton came back to take a 2-1 lead in the third inning, Taylor and Fischer accounting for the runs. Stanton scored one run each in the fourth and fifth, and Miller's belated eighth-inning rally fell shy two runs of victory. Taylor featured with three hits.

Grants but Two Hits.

In the second game Dick Lanahan's speed was too much for the Miller sluggers, the former Eastern High pitching ace limiting his rivals to two hits and fanning eight men. Behind such superb twirling the Stanton team gave great support, and its batters smashed out eleven hits, with Shapiro, Fisher and Lanahan, himself, leading the assault with two each.

A barrage of hits in the third sent three Stanton men over the plate. Another run came in the fourth, and the final in the seventh.

Colonials to Battle Auburn Saturday place him on the sidelines for the next three weeks.

Two Gridmen Injured.

Georgetown returned home last night from the Manhattan game with two injured gridders—Capt. Fred Callahan, center, with a painfully bruised shoulder, and Karl Saur, right guard, with a broken shoulder blade. It will not be known until this afternoon how long the injured will be on the sidelines.

Tom Nally, massive C. U. tackle, suffered a pulled leg in Saturday's warfare against St. John's, but George Lentz, trainer, declared he will be ready for Friday night's battle.

George Washington, although it was tied last week by Clemson, returned to work Saturday morning. The team, undaunted by the breaks of Friday night, has cast all gloom aside and is working in earnest for the coming fray with Auburn. The Tigers completely outgained the powerful Georgia Tech eleven last week, but lost, 16-6.

In one of the most spectacular finishes in the history of football at Georgetown, the Hoyas came back in the fourth quarter against Manhattan to tie the score at 20-all, after being in arrears by three touchdowns until the fourth quarter. Western Maryland lost to Duquesne University Friday night in Pittsburgh, 13-0. The Dukes, incidentally, are leading the East with five victories and sport a 27-6 win over West Virginia.

Maryland face sa breather against Virginia Military Institute this week-end at College Park in a Southern Conference tilt. To date, the Keydets have failed to score, losing to Army, Duke, Emory-Henry and Davidson. The Davidson result last week was 6-0. The Terps are due to arrive here sometime today after losing last Saturday to Tulane in New Orleans, 20-0.

Maryland Park Wins.

Maryland Park took undisputed possession of first place in the Northern section soccer loop by trouncing Hyattsville, 6 to 2, on the latter's field. The Parkers led all the way, holding a 4-0 lead at half-time. Nathaniel Mostow, inside left, scored Hyattsville's lone tally.

Ramage-Birkie Fight Headlines Ring Week

New York, Oct. 15 (AP).—A national program almost devoid of big fights faced the boxing fans this week, although there are plenty of minor engagements to provide entertainment.

The headliners of the week are Jackie "Kid" Berg, the English lightweight, who battled among the headliners in the United States a while back, and the promising young heavyweights, Hans Birkie, of Germany, and Lee Ramage, of California.

Berg, making his second start of his new American invasion, is scheduled to meet Tony Falco in a 10-rounder at the Broadway Arena, New York, Thursday night. Ramage, something of a sensation on the West Coast last winter, is due to face the tough Birkie at Holyoke, Mass., Monday.

Magruder Park Wins.

Magruder Jark Juniors won their series with the Colmar Manor nine when they ended their season yesterday, splitting a double-header on the Magruder Park diamond in Hyattsville. The Parkers won the first game, 7 to 6, but lost the second, 9 to 8. Skeets Chaney was the winning pitcher in the first game and Higgins pitched for the Manor boys in the nightcap. Tommy Bresnahan, Parkers' catcher, took batting honors with five hits in the two games. The Parkers took the first game of the series.

Hill-Climbers Dare Death On Cycles

Gallery Runs to Cover in Motor Bike Event as Wolfe Sets Record.

THE boys who take their lives in their hands—or handlebars—went about the grim business of conquering a 65 per cent grade in the National Capital Motorcycle Club's hill-climbing races yesterday with the unconcern ordinary mortals display toward their routines of pencil pushing or typewriter thumping.

Before the third fire-spitting mechanical steed had charged up the bumpy course most of the 2,000 spectators were convinced that piloting motorcycles up forbidding grades was one occupation they could do very well without. But, be that as it may, the boys who were broncho busting on the high-powered, vicious, wheeled frames went right on battling the grade.

Gallery Runs to Cover.

The second motorcycle to attempt the run, the bucking mount of Shorty Ross, gave the spectators first cause to wonder about their own safety, as well as that of the riders. Ross' wheeled demon behaved admirably about half way up the course, then decided to disperse about 25 per cent of the gallery and headed posthaste, or even faster, toward them. There was nothing for Ross to do but stick along with his capricious juggernaut. Those in the danger zone dove for cover.

That was only a beginning. From then on if a motorcycle wasn't turning turtle on the course, one was running amuck among the spectators, chasing them from pillar to post. Some found refuge in the limbs of sheltering trees. But there were more spectators than trees, so the majority spent the afternoon eluding determined motorcycles.

Wolfe Sets Record.

Willard Wolfe bounded up the grade blithely singing "Who's Afraid of the Big, Bad Hill" to set a new record of 4.97 to win the class B race, which opened the program. From then on his white-dungareed figure was bouncing up the imposing incline all afternoon, subduing skittish tendencies on the part of his temperamental mounts with almost uncanny rhythm and balance. He finished second in the 45 expert and third in the 80-inch class races.

Red House of Washington rode high, wide and handsome on a cycle not so fast as some of the others to third place in two events. Hamilton Polson got farther up than any others in the novice race, parting company with his mount 66 feet 1 inch from the start.

45, expert—Won by Howard Mitzel, York, Pa.; Willard Wolfe, Bethlehem, Pa., second; Red House, Washington, third.
45, professional—Won by Howard Mitzel; Bernard Thanner, Baltimore, second; Red House, third.
80, class B—Won by Pat Ronco; Earl S. Buck, second; Willard Wolfe, third.
Novice—Won by Hamilton Polson, 66 feet 1 inch; Herman Brock, second, 59 feet 4 inches; Ed Reed, third, 50 feet 9 inches.

Emory-Henry Sets Title Chase Pace

Has Won Five Games; Own Goal Uncrossed.

Richmond, Va., Oct. 15 (AP). Those Emory and Henry Wasps who stormed out of the southwest to stamp themselves as one of Virginia's most powerful elevens looked back today on five consecutive victories in as many starts.

Even more impressive was the fact that no team has been able to score against the stout Wasp line while the Emory and Henry ball carriers have run up a total of 76 points while defeating Guilford, Virginia Military, Elon, Roanoke and Hampden-Sydney.

Pitts Leads Sing Sing In Victory Over Police

Ossining, N. Y., Oct. 15 (AP). The Sing Sing Black Sheep, prison football team, overwhelmed its traditional rival, the Port Jervis police team, 40 to 13, today before a crowd of 1,100 outsiders and 2,000 inmates.

Students Cheer Beaten Navy On Return

Middie Team Disappointed Over Overwhelming Loss to Pitt.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Oct. 15 (Spl.). Disappointed but by no means discouraged over the decisive licking absorbed at the hands of Pittsburgh, the Navy football squad returned to Annapolis today to receive a round of cheers from comrades of the regiment of Midshipmen as they filed into Bancroft Hall.

None of the Middies suffered serious hurts in the gruelling struggle that was the season's first in recognized big company.

There were some of the Navy contingent who confidently felt the Tars capable of taming the Panthers, owing to the generally better team Navy mentors have produced at this stage of the season. Among the rank and file of gridiron fans, however, the edge was conceded to the Smoky City crew, but not by as great a margin as the game developed. All of the Navy contingent were prompt to commend the Pittsburghers for their clear-cut win.

Notwithstanding the better state of affairs, the game demonstrated that the Middies are not ready to accomplish the big things that their ardent supporters believed.

The Middies now look to the contest with the University of Virginia to be played here next Saturday, and, incidentally, it will be their last game on home grounds; Philadelphia, New York, Princeton and Baltimore will furnish the settings for the others.

Mohawks to Practice.

Members of the Mohawk football team, preparing for the curtain-raiser with the Irvingtons of Baltimore in the Monumental City next Sunday, will assemble tonight at the Mohawk Clubhouse, 515 H street southeast, for practice. Coach Bill Delaney has issued a call for back field men, tackles and guards.

Michigan Foe Of Ohio State Saturday

CHICAGO, Oct. 15 (AP).—The first big explosion of the Western Conference football championship will occur at Ann Arbor next Saturday.

The Wolverines of Michigan, defending champions, will make their first start of the 1933 championship scramble against the Buckeyes of Ohio State in the outstanding game of the day's schedule.

The champions and their foes, considered outstanding contenders, will go into the game with the result a toss-up, due to the powerful showing of both elevens in their prechampionship games.

Beat Virginia, Vandy.

Michigan bowled over its first two opponents, Michigan State and Cornell, burying the big red team from Ithaca, 40-to-0, yesterday, with Ohio State conquering Virginia and Vanderbilt, neither of which was regarded as easy opponents. The Buckeyes yesterday clipped Vanderbilt, 20-to-0, in a contest regarded as a warm-up for the tough game with Michigan.

Although the Wolverines-Ohio State battle holds the spotlight, three other championship combats will be fought. Two other members of the conference, Illinois and Minnesota, will engage in important intersectional battles, with the Illinois taking on the Army at Cleveland, Ohio, and the Gophers tackling the Pittsburgh Panthers at Minneapolis.

Northwestern-Indiana.

Two of the strictly conference battles will be played in Chicago, with Northwestern tangling with Indiana at Dyche Stadium, and the "new deal" Maroons meeting one of their most ancient enemies, Purdue, at Stagg Field.

The Surprising Iowa team will go into action against Wisconsin in the Hawkeyes annual homecoming battle at Iowa City.

Illinois' passing attack, which subdued Wisconsin, 21-0, yesterday, indicates that the Illini, have one of their good teams to send against the Army. The Cadets, sending their first, second and third teams into the fray, ran over Delaware, 52-0, yesterday.

Match Race at Belmont Park Between Winooka and Equipoise Falls Through

Naylor Turns Down Plan For Mile

Kynes' Application for Track Is Rejected in California.

THE match race between Winooka, Australian "wonder horse," and C. V. Whitney's Equipoise, will not be run as tentatively arranged for November 7 at Belmont Park. Definite refusal to allow the Anzac sprinter to compete with the American horse over the 1-mile distance was forthcoming from Rufe Naylor, manager of Winooka's tour, in a wire to Whitney Saturday.

Naylor had tried to arrange a 6 or 7 furlong race with Equipoise, but Whitney declined to send his horse into action over that distance, claiming that the longer route provided the only suitable test for a match with an international angle.

Jamestown May Start.

Winooka will not want for competition Friday, when he races at Laurel. Bob Smith says he will send his Okapi into the race and C. H. Trotter, trainer of Character, recently claimed by the Jersey stable, has said he will fill out the race, if necessary. There is also a possibility that George D. Widener's Jamestown may start. Mrs. Payne Whitney may get into the competition with Curacao and Gold Step may run for Sheldon Fairbanks against the foreign sprinter.

Permission was granted last week to operate a race track in San Francisco under the name of the St. Francis Jockey Club. At the same time, the California Horse Racing Board turned down an application from Peter B. Kyne, noted author, and William P. Kyne, well-known turf promoter generally credited with pushing through the legalization of racing in the State. The Kynes wished to build a track near San Mateo, a few miles from the San Mateo track.

Sweeping Light, the 4-year-old mentioned in "sponge case" charges last Monday, was eligible for the Continental Handicap at Jamaica Saturday, but is barred from other races. Under the rules, the horse, barred until investigation of the sponge charges is completed, is eligible to run in a stake race for which he was nominated in advance. And such was the Continental Handicap.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

Prof. Albert Einstein, whose advanced scientific theories have won for him fame as the greatest living scientist, deals with problems so far advanced that laymen find it impossible to understand just what it is all about—much less understand the theories themselves.

His theory of relativity, which is his outstanding contribution to science according to scientists, was set forth in it essentials in a three-page booklet. This booklet, far from being as simple as its size might seem to indicate, was so complicated that few could grasp its meaning.

Since its publication, according to a bibliography compiled by Prof. Morris Lecot, of the University of Louvain, up to four years ago there had been 3,775 other books, some of them voluminous, written to explain Einstein's theory. Many of them were strictly scientific works, written for the scientist and advanced scholar; but others were compiled to give the layman some idea of the theory. In addition, there have been countless magazine and newspaper articles written about the same little booklet's contents.

Einstein has written several other important papers, some of them explanatory of terms used in advanced science. Strange as it seems, in some of his papers he deals with the smallest particles of matter, while in others he considers the entire universe.

Tomorrow: America's money.

Dear Al: Laurel Race Track, Oct. 16.

One of the biggest jobs in America was assigned to that man who drove the two-horse team pulling the only harrow in sight during last Saturday's program here. The harrow was only a slightly exaggerated garden rake. The speed of his team was about a furlong an hour. By rapid calculation I figured that if man and horses remained in motion for 347 hours and 59 minutes they might have made an impression on the heavy track. At least one horse trainer was heard to remark, pointing to the stranger on the harrow, "If that fellow had a lot of company, maybe I could win a race?

BILL.

First race—Best By Test turned in a good effort in her first outing when opposed to a tough field. Meade will have the mount, of course, and I see no reason for a miss. Omayya is another that showed much promise in a lone race. Gets second call. The experienced Doeskin for the show.

Second race—Bookie B was groomed on the half-milers and came through with a smashing effort last out gets first call. I'm inclined to give Sister Madge a chance for second. Struck her stride out Ohio way and has not run her race hereabouts. Tut Tut drops down several notches and takes off enough weight to be dangerous.

Third race—Dock Light was outspeeded in his recent jumping races. However, he jumped well over at Aqueduct. Blackcock has had the benefit of a race here and seems second best. George Jessel was allowed to run the other day and barely missed.

Fourth race—Off Duty exhibited high speed and much gameness in his last start. Will have the hustling Tipton aboard and may lead from flag fall to finish. Although I could not work up enough courage to put Neverfail on top, I believe this one will be prominent. Virtually left the last time and closed like the wind. Landsman for the show.

Fifth race—Cutie Face is in excellent condition and as game as anything on four legs hereabouts. Understand Renick will be in charge with instructions to beat Flying Hour. The latter is also sharp, but I'll take my chances with the first named. Corrymeela for the rest.

Sixth race—I'll take Snapback in this field. Rather uncertain fellow, but hard to handle when really sent after the money. Cathop has been racing well in sprints despite the fact that it has been a long time since he collected the major end of a purse. Finished his last as though he was crying for more route. Bold Lover to take care of the others.

Seventh race—Thistle Play, a sharp one at Detroit, may win at the first asking in this spot. Unloaded without mishap and I expect a crack down. Loughport has a chance. The sleeper of the field may be West Main.

Eighth race—Prince Tokalon won breezing in that last and I'm stringing along. Marcasite and Even Up for the rest.

Charles Cauffman and Tiny MacDougall tied for second with 8 points, and Bits Horner, W. Davis and Willie Winfield were deadlocked for third place with 2 points

MacDougall and Cauffman gave Bieber trouble in the mile and half-mile races, forcing him to push the pedals of his racing model to the utmost to avert defeat. 20,000 See Boston Lose.

Boston, Oct. 15 (AP).—The right arm and right leg of "Press" Presnell today provided the Portsmouth Spartans with a 13-0 victory over the Boston Redskins before 20,000 at Fenway Park.

Presnell threw a 45-yard forward pass to John Cavosie, his left end, for the Spartans' touchdown in the second period, place-kicked the extra point and then booted over two field goals in the third period, when the Redskins stopped Spartan advances inside their 10-yard line.

The Redskins opened in impressive fashion, marching the kick-off up to Portsmouth's 10-yard line before Jim Musick ruined the only Boston scoring chance of the game by fumbling.

Kelly ran 70 yards to a touchdown in the first quarter. The other three touchdowns resulted from bullet forward passes by Friedman, caught once by Tom Nash, former Georgia star, and by Kelly twice. Friedman place-kicked for three extra points, failing on the last attempt, pass.

Sarron, Burl Train Hard For Bout

Both Are Taking Struggle Tomorrow Night Seriously.

IMPELLED by promises of a shot at N. B. A. featherweight champion Freddy Miller which the promoters have been dangling before him, Pete Sarron has been training faithfully for the last twelve days in preparation for his match with Eddie Burl at Portner's tomorrow. His program, which started out moderately enough, has been worked up to the stage where he is now doing 3 miles of road work each morning and between 8 and 10 rounds of boxing in the afternoon.

Burl, who sometimes trains for a fight and sometimes does not, has been no less sincere in his efforts to get in shape for the impending fourth meeting with his perennial foe. He has been following practically the same routine as Sarron to such effect that there is now a chance that he will go stale before ring time.

Have Met Three Times.

The three previous meetings between the two boys which have resulted in a win for each and one draw offer proof that in so far as styles are concerned neither has an edge. Burl's boring in tactics tend to offset the advantage that Sarron's whirlwind gyrations give him over the usual opposition. Sarron's whirlwind gyrations tend to offset the advantage that Burl's boring in tactics give him over the usual opposition.

Condition and style being practically a standoff, there is only one straw to indicate the direction of the wind—and it is generally believed that it will take only a slight wind to throw the tide of battle either way. The question of weight may throw the balance in Sarron's favor.

Weight Forced Down.

Burl made an effort to force Sarron in below 126 pounds, but the Birmingham battler would not accept the match under those terms, insisting on being allowed a 128-pound maximum. At the persent time Sarron scales between 126 and 127, and probably will not be far below the limit set at ring time. Burl's strenuous efforts to reach peak condition have forced his weight down to 122 pounds, and it is believed that he will not weight over 123 at the ringside.

Four or five pounds weight difference means little to the heavier fighters, but to the mosquito fleet it means a great deal. Because of the weight difference Sarron is expected to be a slight favorite to wipe out his arch rival.

Davis Faces Genaro.

In the 8-round semifinal, Roddy Davis, who came a cropper in his last bout with Max Koshover, will attempt to hurdle another tough opponent in the person of Mickey Genaro. Genaro is generally conceded an overwhelming edge in experience and ring generalship, which is expected to tell the story.

Three fours involving Babe Picato and Joe Green, Benny Mack vs. Sailor Larkin and Young Dizon against Harry Groves, of Baltimore, will round out the bill.

"Cap" Stubbs Might Just as Well! By Edwina

Walt Mason, Himself

October.

October comes with mellow light, and cooling breezes fan my brow, and there are frequent frosts by night—it's time to think of winter now. October sees the early death of flowers that made the autumn gay, and there's a hint in every breath that winter now is on the way. This pleasant month has many charms which ought to soothe the heart that's sore; and yet we're filled with vague alarms, we know that winter's at the door. We can't enjoy the evening stroll beneath the calm October skies for thinking of the tons of coal a man must purchase if he's wise. We can't enjoy the soothing breeze, the sunset hues, the milkman's song, for thinking of the pipes that freeze when harsh old winter comes along. It is a month of which to boast in fervent terms, in language tall; but winter stands, a dreary ghost, and throws its shadow over all. It is a better month than June, it is a better month than May, its elements are all in tune to charm our sordid cares away. We can't appreciate its worth, because beyond it winter stands prepared to camp upon this earth and seal it up with icy bands. And that's our trouble all the time, we can't enjoy the good we know, because we think 'twould be a crime to overlook impending woe. We're always gazing far ahead, our eyes are fixed upon next year, to figure out some shapes of dread that we are certain will appear.

Minister Ends Service Here

Dr. Copenhaver Honored at Evening Worship of Epworth M. E.

"Peace will be achieved when we reconcile ourselves with God as He is reconciled with us," the Rev. Dr. John C. Copenhaver said yesterday in his farewell sermon at Epworth Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

"The human heart longs for peace as a relationship involving personal, natonal or international contacts," said Dr. Copenhaver. He emphasized the power of peace in recalling the experience of the Apostle Paul at sea during a great storm that threatened to sink the small vessel in which his company huddled. Regardless of the external experience, with the power of the peace of God in the heart, much agony was averted, the pastor reminded.

Yesterday's service marked the end of Dr. Copenhaver's five years at the Epworth Church. He has been appointed presiding elder of the Roanoke District of the Baltimore conference. After the evening service last night, a farewell fellowship hour was given in honor of the minister and his wife by the Wesley Fellowship group of the church.

Radio Waves and Ripples

WASHINGTON'S debutantes will be featured in a weekly WRC broadcast, beginning Thursday, at 5:30 p. m.

Trials of an elderly couple in raising their niece to be a debutante will be aired in story form. Each week sponsors of the program will seek advice from Washington social buds.

The first broadcast will feature Patty Benton and Frances Simpson. The idea originated with Mrs. Kendrick Phillips, of Washington.

Mrs. Phillips broke into radio in the coast-to-coast broadcast of the Lum and Abner wedding.

The N. B. C. minds, by the way, are trying hard to forget some of the things that happened during the Washington Auditorium show. The 6,000 or so loudspeaker fans who were there possibly didn't care, but the minds are apprehensive lest the listeners in the country observed a cue slip or two, the singing of the final solo in several keys or the five-minute "hole" which necessitated repeated playing of the theme song at the end. The people in the auditorium simply got up and walked out.

Whitecaps.

WJSV—Arthur Henderson on "Disarmament," 4:10 p. m.; Wilkins Surprise Show, Announcer Trout interviewing Elder Michaux, 6:45 p. m.; Bing Crosby and Leonard Hayton's Orch., 8:30 p. m. WMAL—American Library Association, 5:15 p. m.; Richfield Country Club, 7:30 p. m.; The Poet Prince, 11:15 p. m. WRC—Floyd Gibbons, 8:30 p. m.; A. & P. Gypsies, 9 p. m.; Jules Lande, violinist, Morton Bowe, tenor, 10:45 p. m. WOL—Evangelist Billy Sunday, 6:45 p. m.; Eleanor Herring, violinist; Alice Finckel, pianist, local show, 7:30 p. m.; Attorney Max B. Steuer, "Hitlerism," 8:45 p. m.

This is from an advertising agency's letter to WJSV's Sundial announcer:

"And so that you may put yourself in the proper mental attitude to converse intelligently and sympathetically on bird seed and its relation to the problems of today, will you tell us whether or not you have a canary? If you have, we shall have the Justrite Co., send you a liberal supply of samples for the personal delectation of your feathered pet.

"In case you are among the unfortunate ones who don't own a canary, kindly let us know and as soon as the European shipment arrives we shall send a feathered songster who will inspire you to give Justrite continuity the proper histronic and oratorical utterances."

Promise?

Whatever it was Chancellor Hitler said in his Saturday broadcast, it sounded as though he meant it. This department couldn't hang around long enough to hear the English interpretation, also from Berlin. Both Columbia and N. B. C. arranged the broadcast at the last minute via short wave.

WOL expects to improve its George Washington football broadcasts as time goes on. The unnatural lighting and the height of the radio box from the playing field are offering Announcer Ted Ostenkamp unexpected difficulties in identifying players and determining yardage gained or lost. A couple of fellows who insisted upon obliterating yard-line guides by sitting on the numerals didn't help matters much.

The A. B. S. station has booked Pianist Alice Finckel and Violinist Eleanor Herring, Washington talent, for 7:30 tonight. An hour and 15 minutes later they are supposed to radio from N. B. C.'s WMAL. Looks like the girls are making good.

A. B. S. announces the first American broadcast of "La Gioconda" Wednesday at 10 p. m....Several times lately the Ed Wynn chain has changed its mind about broadcasting certain operas...Possibly the copyright holders objected... A short-wave transmitter at Schenectady will be used again this winter to keep the Byrd party in entertainment... WMAL's sorry it can't carry the Eastern-Central football game today, postponed from Friday...The minds feel Tech-Roosevelt tomorrow and Eastern-Western Friday will be enough high school ball for one week...New York Riverside Church's Harry Emerson Fosdick, Monseigneur Robert F. Keegan and Rabbi Stephen Wise are to radio on the spiritual significance of the new deal for Columbia tonight, 10:30... Arthur Henderson's "Disarmament" talk will be relayed from Geneva by the British Broadcasting Corporation to Columbia and WJSV this afternoon at 4:10...Eastern Penitentiary Warden Herbert Smith is first in Columbia's crimes series opener Wednesday at 2:30 p. m. . . . Attorney General Cummings and Senator Copeland follow . . . N. B. C. has come through with the expected announcement of replacement of the returning William Hard with Newsman George Holmes . . . Hard's last broadcast will be Wednesday night . . . He leaves this month on a lecture tour.

The lady under the expensive-looking headpiece is Genia Fonarriova, N. B. C. concert soprano, whom revolution in Russia drove to this country. Columbia is sending John N. Dyer (left) to the South Pole to operate the short-wave transmitter for the Byrd programs.

New Tax Planned For Foreign Bonds

(Associated Press.)

Senator Clark (Democrat), Missouri, said in a statement here yesterday he would ask Congress to place an additional surtax on income derived from new issues of foreign securities.

He plans this action, he said to protect the American people who have been "plundered out of billions of dollars in the last 15 years by the sale in this country of worthless foreign securities."

"The measure which I propose to introduce," Clark said, "is designed to put a brake upon such frauds upon the American investing public by the imposition of an additional tax of from 1 to 3 per cent upon income derived from these foreign securities."

Y. M. C. A. Gives Good Exercise By Volley Ball

Sport Suitable for All Ages Offered With Special Card.

Exercise without bodily contact, something many men desire, is offered in volley ball by the "Y" as part of the "Keep Healthy" Week sponsored by The Post and the Y. M. C. A. During the week, free opportunity will be given Washington men to acquaint themselves with this valuable form of exercise.

While the game has been considered an old man's game by many, it is in reality a game for men of all ages. It was invented at the Holyoke, Mass., Y. M. C. A. in 1895 to provide a recreational game for both sexes. Since then it has spread all around the world. In the Orient it is distinctly a young man's game.

Volley ball, the "Y" says, can be as strenuous a game as one cares to make it. Those wishing moderate exercise are not forced to overdo, while the player who keeps constantly on his toes, so to speak, can get a real workout. The running, jumping, striking, reaching and passing movements required of both arms; the coordination of eye in accurate following and playing the ball, coupled with the stooping, turning, twisting and body bending motions make it a most excellent form of all-around exercise. It is not a complicated game and, therefore, affords good mental relaxation from business cares. Since there is no bodily contact, fair and clean play predominates.

Volley ball, it is pointed out, requires speed and action of the legs, trunk and arms, all of which must be manipulated with great accuracy if the play is to be successful. The ball is frequently driven with bullet like speed at a player which requires an instantaneous reaction on the part of that player. Speed is required as well when the opponent chooses to hit a slow, easy ball as far as possible out of the reach of the receiver.

Women Will Seek New Flight Record

New York, Oct. 15 (AP).—Mrs. Floyd Bennett christened an airplane at Brooklyn's Floyd Bennett Feld today and two women will take it aloft on Tuesday in an attempt to set a new endurance record.

Viola Gentry and Mary Sansom, of Hartford, Conn., will fly the ship and hope to keep it aloft three weeks. They will refuel in the air.

The craft is an orange and blue monoplane. It carries a full size bed and other conveniences. Its gasoline capacity is 254 gallons and the pilots expect to make only two fuelings a day.

How to Keep Well

Self-Controlled Blood Pressure.
By Dr. W. A. Evans.

There is an old story of a man who mounted his camels and rode far over the world looking for diamonds. Finding none, he became reconciled and returned home. When he watered his camel in the home brook he noticed diamonds in the stream.

Surely some captious correspondent will offer correction to this story, for it has been told many times with many variations. A very popular lecturer once told it in one way, matched it with similar stories, and made the whole into a lecture, the subject of which was "Acres of Diamonds." The theme was that rewards lie right at our feet and we can have them if we look for them there.

There is no health subject of more general interest than high blood pressure. Many who have it mount their camels and search the world for a remedy, and remedies by the score are found. The trouble about most of them is that they don't work.

There is more than one kind of high blood pressure and more than one cause for it. The cause and cure for one important variety of it, possibly the most prevalent kind, lies within rather than without. Having ridden the camel across the Desert of Sahara and into many foreign lands, we come back home and find the diamonds in our own brook. If, on repeated examinations, the blood pressure is found to be high but uneven, rising and falling through a range of 15 points or more, the probability is strong that the principal cause of the trouble is emotional in character. We often hear of blood pressures that drop 20 or more points. In such cases it is reasonably certain that emotional disturbance was the cause of the peak pressure and emotional calm was responsible for the drop.

In all this great group of high blood pressure disorders the most important part of the control is the cultivation of calm, poise, equanimity, and emotional control. If dieting has any place it is of secondary importance or less. Treatment by drugs ranks even lower in the scale. Overcoming constipation and colonic flushing are of trifling importance.

The procedures for the development of equanimity belong in two categories, the not-to-do's and the to-do's. The nots include worry, anxiety, and all other forms of fear. Also anger and the more active emotions. If some one suggests insomnia, the answer is that poor sleeping is merely a manifestation of a lack of equanimity.

The do's consist in adopting an attitude of hopefulness and good cheer. Buoyancy of spirits is a good attitude, provided one does not let it run to exuberance. The radiation of good cheer may be carried to the point where it overheats the radiator and scorches the radiated.

All of this is a matter of self-medication, not meaning thereby taking medicine out of a bottle.

Bunions.

F. C. writes: I would like to know the cause and the cure for bunions. I have been suffering with these for several years and visits to the chiropodist give me very little relief. Is there any massaging or bathing of the feet that will relieve the pain?

Reply.

Massaging, bathing, and the use of foot powders contribute to comfort, but beyond that they do not go.

Bunyons result from displacement of the bones. Nothing short of replacement can cure them. Some of the secondary effects of bunions may be relieved by such measures as wearing broad shoes, wearing protective pads, wearing toe separators, and keeping corns trimmed. The very troublesome corn is the one on the side of the great toe in the region of the ball.
